

82 Pueblo Crewmen Freed After 'Apology'

U.S. Denies Validity of Document; Cmdr. Bucher Says Men Were Beaten

SEOUL (AP) — The commander of the USS Pueblo said today he and his men were beaten in the final weeks of their North Korean captivity in "the most concentrated form of terror that I've ever dreamed possible."

To win the release of the 82 men after 11 months of captivity, a U.S. representative in Panmunjom signed a statement apologizing for the "grave acts of espionage committed by the U.S. ship . . . after having intruded into the territorial waters" of North Korea. But first he repudiated the statement and said he was signing it only to free the ship's crew, a procedure to which the North Koreans agreed.

Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher told a news conference of the beatings after he and his surviving 81 crewmen reached South Korea and were sent to a U.S. military hospital for medical checkups.

Some of the men still had black eyes and bruises and others suffered from malnutrition, Bucher said.

"I was beaten less than anyone else," he said.

"I was mostly terrified of possible beating and I was kept in solitary confinement during the entire 11 months and there were many occasions when I didn't think I was going to make it."

He said he was punched and kicked by the North Koreans but never hit with a stick or a club as some of his men were.

"Commencing with the week before last, we went through the most concentrated form of terror that I've ever seen or dreamed is possible."

"I wasn't prepared totally for the beatings . . . I thought that they were totally brutal with no mercy of any kind. They were done for one purpose and that was to terrify people. I had about half of the crew last week beaten badly. There are still many people in the crew today who have carried black eyes and bruised ribs. I had one man last week (who was) beaten with a four by four (timber)."

"Very Bad Conditions"

"I think that there are many in my crew who are in very bad physical condition and just from a nutritional point of view."

"The bruises and that sort of thing I think are going to heal up quickly," Bucher said.

The men were in a hospital near Seoul undergoing the medical checks before being flown to rejoin their families for Christmas in San Diego, Calif.

A U.S. military spokesman in Seoul said he did not know how soon the Pueblo men would leave for the United States. But it was thought here they might leave Tuesday.

The spokesman said there were no immediate plans to let

Hot Line for Cold Beer

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — "Send up a couple of beers," said the wool buyer from Coonabarabran. But he was talking on LBJ's "hot line" to the White House, and soon the place was swarming with police.

A Canberra hotel keeper told today about the incident during President Johnson's visit last December for the funeral of Prime Minister Harold Holt.

"I was behind the desk going over some dockets when these grim-faced Yanks walked in and said they wanted to make a security check of the premises," said the hotel manager, who asked that his name not be used.

"They said President Johnson was checking into the place; they looked under beds, banged on walls and even went over the boiler room with a fine-tooth comb.

"Some people came in from the PMG (Postmaster General) Department and installed a private phone to the White House."

"The President never really checked in. It seems it is the custom for security reasons to book him in several hotels. He stayed at another hotel."

"Later this wool buyer comes up to the desk and wants a room for the night. The girls booked him into the room which had been set aside for Mr. Johnson."

"This bloke goes up to the room and before he unpacks his bags he picks up the phone."

"There is a blip and the other end says, 'White House?'"

"Room service — I want room service," the guy says.

"This is the White House, comes from the other end."

"Send up a couple of cold beers," the traveler said.

"We had forgotten that the phone was still in the room. Soon the place was swarming with G-men and police who are yelling, 'Who is using the White House phone?'"

The Embassy was in a sweat.

"The poor bloke in the room didn't know what to do. He checked out and didn't wait for his beers."

Pueblo Negotiations:

Strange, Maybe Even Kooky

WASHINGTON (AP) — Release of the Pueblo crewmen was obtained under what Secretary of State Dean Rusk calls one of the strangest diplomatic procedures in cold war history and another high official calls just plain "kooky."

The formula called for the chief U.S. negotiator to sign a statement admitting U.S. guilt but only after the North Koreans agreed to let him publicly announce beforehand that the statement was a lie.

"Apparently the North Koreans believe there is propaganda value even in a worthless document which Maj. Gen. Gilbert H. Woodward publicly labeled false before he signed it," Rusk said.

The document signed by Woodward, the chief U.S. negotiator, said the Pueblo had entered North Korean waters, and declared that the U.S. government "shoulders full responsibility and solemnly apologizes for grave acts of espionage." It gave "firm assurance no U.S. ships will intrude again."

Woodward, in his public repudiation in advance of signing the statement, said "the document which I am going to sign is at variance with the U.S. position but my signature will not and cannot alter the facts."

"I will sign the document to free the crew and only to free the crew."

Rusk commented that in 19 years of public service he knew of no precedent for the contradictory statements.

Another high official privately described the final formula, one of two suggested in the past month by Washington, as "kooky."

The instructions for Woodward to sign the false statement came from the State Department with the knowledge of President Johnson, officials said. President-elect Nixon was informed but not consulted in advance about the arrangement, they added.

The South Korean government also was kept informed of the developments and "showed good understanding of our problems," authorities said.

While Rusk said efforts will have to be pursued further to regain the Pueblo, State Department officials said no more private meetings were planned at Panmunjom to obtain its release.

The North Koreans are believed to have long ago exhausted its value as far as secrets are concerned and they could not sail it on the high seas without risk of reprisals.

State Department officials credited Undersecretary of State Nicholas Katzenbach and a small group of Korean experts including Ambassador Winthrop Brown, former U.S. envoy to Korea and Laos and Country Director James Leonard, with working out the formula North Korea finally accepted. They gave this tentative explanation for its acceptance:

North Korea will make as much use as it can of the U.S. "confession" that the Pueblo had illegally intruded into Korean waters on an espionage mission when it was captured Jan. 23. The document may be believed in some Communist countries but will not be accepted in most other countries.

Favored Johnson

U.S. negotiators also had argued that it would be better for North Korea to deal now with the outgoing Johnson administration, rather than re-negotiate the whole case with the Nixon administration.

Negotiators also made the point that release of the 82 crewmen around Christmas would be warmly received by the American public.

High U.S. officials said the United States put two conditions on an offer made Dec. 17 to sign a false confession in order to obtain the release of the men.

One was that all 82 men had to be returned by Dec. 23. The other was that the United States would not accept the facts contained in statements.

The offer the North Koreans finally accepted was one U.S. negotiators suggested as an alternative to a so-called "over-write" proposal. Under the "over-write" plan Gen. Woodward would simply have signed a receipt for delivery of the Pueblo crew on top of a "confession" of guilt by the United States, thus leaving unclear exactly what he was signing.

The Captain of the USS Pueblo, Navy Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, speaks at a news conference today at a U.S. military camp south of Panmunjom, Korea. Bucher emphatically denied the Pueblo had ever intruded into North Korean waters before its seizure 11 months ago. (AP Wirephoto)

Ready for Lunar Orbit

Apollo Sails On

SPACE CENTER, Houston occur early Tuesday when (AP) — The bold adventurers of Apollo 8 is behind the moon, out Apollo 8 sped ever closer to the moon today and reported they are ready to blast themselves into lunar orbit early Tuesday, fulfilling man's centuries-old desire to explore this mysterious body.

As the spaceship flew unerringly toward the grip of lunar gravity, commander Frank Borman reported the astronauts were healthy and eager to make their Christmas Eve orbit of the moon.

More than 180,000 miles from his home planet and nearly 30,000 miles from the moon, Borman reported.

"We're looking ahead, of course, to tomorrow, when we'll be just 60 miles from the moon."

Must Be Perfect

But he emphasized he would not commit his ship to a lunar orbit unless he was satisfied everything was perfect.

"I hope you have everyone looking over everything very carefully," Borman told Mission Control. "We want a perfect spacecraft before we consider the LOI burn."

LOI stands for lunar orbit insertion—the moment when the astronauts fire their engine to make their speed sufficiently to enter moon orbit.

That critical engine burn is to Fox Cities — Partly cloudy and colder tonight with a chance of snow flurries. Low tonight near 8, high Tuesday near 20. Wind west at 10-18 m.p.h. tonight, 8-12 m.p.h. Tuesday. Precipitation probability 20 per cent tonight and 10 per cent Tuesday.

reached a climatic moment at 3:29 p.m. EST today when they were to be captured by the gravity field of the moon — the first time man would ever be in the grasp of another heavenly body.

The tug of the moon will increase Apollo 8's speed, and the spacemen will sweep toward their historic lunar orbit. A burst from their spaceship engine at 4:59 a.m. Tuesday is to swing them into orbit just 69 miles above the surface.

Glynn Lunney, a flight controller, said today that "everything with the spacecraft and the people looks good for the lunar orbit. The spacecraft is working in an essentially perfect fashion."

He said the only problem was in a secondary cooling system.

"It appears," he said, "that perhaps the back pressure valve did not close completely in the secondary evaporator and that's being trouble shot right now. I don't think that's anything serious."

Lunney said, "we're in good shape as far as the consumables are concerned—the fuel, oxygen and hydrogen."

He said that the course of Apollo 8 was so perfect that a midcourse correction planned today had been cancelled. He said a small correction change

Julie Becomes Mrs. Ike, Off on Secret Honeymoon

NEW YORK (AP) — Julie Nixon, younger daughter of President-elect Nixon, and Dwight David Eisenhower II, only grandson of the former President, were married Sunday in a brief Protestant ceremony that from beginning to end carried out the bride's wish for a private and personal wedding.

Before a small, white, silk-covered altar banked by rows of red and white poinsettias in the historic old Marble Collegiate Church, Julie surprised her father when she turned and kissed him after he gave her hand to the groom. At the end of the ceremony, she again broke tradition and did not kiss the groom.

"That was her idea," Nixon told reporters after the 15-minute ceremony. " . . . If she handles all of the great events of her life as well as this marriage, she will be all right."

It was also Julie's idea to substitute the words "and now in the Reformed Church of America service. The Nixons are Quakers. David, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Eisenhower, is an Episcopalian.

"I rather thought this was a special day," Nixon said. "Just before coming here I saw the first shots of the Apollo flight and I just heard of the release of the Pueblo crew tonight. Dec. 22 is a lucky day."

Other Pictures on Page A-12

The young couple barred newsmen from the wedding and reception, but posed for photographers in a press room at the Hotel Plaza, site of the reception.

Julie, 26, radiant in a Victorian, full-skirted, ivory gown of orange dress with puffed sleeves and a high neck, stood beside the groom, who wore a cutaway. She clutched a modest white bouquet of lily of the valley, narcissus, sweetheart roses and hollyhocks. Her Eisenhower veil was held with a crown of seed pearls.

David, also 26, held her hand in both of his, letting go only when she removed her short white gloves to show reporters the diamond circlet wedding ring she received in the single-ring ceremony.

At first somewhat startled when she was addressed as Mrs. Eisenhower, the dark-haired bride fielded questions with composure, refusing only to reveal their wedding trip destination.

"It's a secret," Julie said. The couple was expected to take a short trip before returning to classes on Jan. 2. David is a junior at Amherst College, in Amherst, Mass.; Julie will begin her junior year studies at Smith College in nearby Northampton, where they have rented a $60-a-month apartment.

David, flashing a broad grin, balked at first at kissing Julie for photographers. But goaded by photographers' cries of "kiss her," he pecked her cheek, then led Julie to the reception upstairs, in the Plaza's Grand Ballroom.

The receiving line lasted for more than an hour outside the Renaissance style room, decorated with pink tablecloths, holly wreaths, pink candles and green garlands.

A six-tier wedding cake, topped with a tiny bouquet of bouvardia, was wheeled to the center of the ballroom. The couple cut the first pieces together—David's hand over Julie's.

The bride fed David the first piece, then offered her father a slice. Mrs. Nixon was next, and then Sgt. and Mrs. John Mooney of Washington, D.C., who were asked to take some cake to former President and Mrs. Eisenhower, who watched the wedding ceremony on a special television circuit in separate rooms at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington.

Eisenhower is recuperating from a series of heart attacks, while the former First Lady is ill with the flu.

Candles Add Warmth, Provide Soft Light for Holiday Season

If you plan to add a holiday glow to your home this year with candles, you should consider those that are handsome rather than pretty, masculine rather than too-feminine and rich in hue.

This is the fashion word from Jack Armstrong, director of Hallmark Candles, who explains that masculinity is important to women buying decorative candles.

"The only rooms in the home which are usually feminine are the bedroom and the kitchen."

Few candles are used in decorating these rooms," he said.

"The living rooms — den, study and recreation room — in most homes have a masculine decor. These and the living-dining areas are the rooms where candles are used most often."

Color Accents

According to today's color-mad designers, most candles for Christmas '68 have been designed as color accents in a finished room to dramatize wallpaper, curtains, the rug or a particularly striking piece of furniture.

"A candle can add much to a room," Armstrong said, "providing soft light and a warm flavor. But you have to go about the decorating correctly."

The 'correct' way differs from room to room. The important things to consider are color, height and thickness—then you can spot them most attractively around the proper rooms, he said.

Intricate Lattice-Work

Candles with a Mediterranean flair seem especially popular this year. One, called the Armada, is a rich red and black with Spanish carvings. Another is Franciscan, a candle within a candle. The outer shell is intricate lattice-work housing a smaller round candle of matching color. The lattice grill does not melt as the inner candle burns.

Square tapers in a rainbow of colors are new this season, a first in candle design. Tapers continue to be the most appropriate style for romantic dining.

In feminine vein is a new Saxony candle, with white flowers sculpted into a white round three inches in diameter. It is regal when used in pairs in more formal settings.

For rooms with extensive bookcases, the company is offering an antique coins candle. Antique gold and bronze Greek coins are embedded into the sides and complement interiors with library or collector decor. The masculine accent of the new candles should appeal to the man of the house while enabling milady to warm each room with charming, glowing candlelight.

It Was a family Christmas party when members of Cadette Troop 14 entertained Dec. 17 at Kimberly Savings and Loan. Santa was there with gifts for all, made by the Cadettes. The Christmas tree was decorated in the old fashioned way with popcorn and cranberry strings, cherries and cookies. Old World Craftsmanship and attention to detail are features of this year's holiday candles. Especially favored are carved candles with the Mediterranean influence of France, Spain and Greece. The more decorative candles lean to masculine shade and styles.

Christmas Stamp

You may receive a Christmas card this year that has the same design as the postage stamp on the envelope. The official U.S. Christmas stamp selected by the post office department is the Angel Gabriel, a detail from Jan Van Eyck's masterpiece, The Annunciation. The same detail of the famous painting, which hangs in the National Gallery, appears on a 1968 Christmas greeting published by Hallmark Cards.

Water frequently if soil is light, and not so often if soil is heavily packed. Keep the plant away from drafts, and give it lots of light. Ideal temperatures for poinsettias are sixty-five to seventy-five degrees in the daytime, and slightly lower at night.

Nixon Cabinet Wives Prepare To Meet Washington Tasks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wives of the 12 men named as Cabinet members by President-elect Nixon include a big game hunter, a lawyer who never practiced, an Italian immigrant and a gourmet cook.

Six of them already have lived in Washington at one time or another and all are looking forward to life in the nation's capital. Several are having house - hunting problems.

The big game hunter is Mrs. Maurice Stans, whose husband was named secretary of commerce and who has bagged several trophies on African safaris.

Both Law Students
The lawyer is Mrs. William P. Rogers, wife of the newly named secretary of state. She met her husband when they were both law students, but she never took her bar exam and never practiced, saying her four children kept her too busy.

Mrs. John Volpe, 57, came to this country from her native Pescosansesco, Italy, when she was two years old. Her husband, now governor of Massachusetts, has been selected as secretary of transportation.

Cooking is the specialty of Mrs. George P. Shultz, whose husband was named secretary of labor. She once attended a gourmet cooking school on the GI bill.

A Closer Look
Here's a closer look at the distaff side of the Nixon cabinet.

Adele Langston Rogers attended the recent Washington ceremonies for the naming of the cabinet with a cast on her knee. She had just gotten out of the hospital after corrective surgery on an ankle which had not mended properly from a break a year ago when she slipped on the steps of the Supreme Court building.

Four Children
The Rogers have four children — Dale, 31; Anthony, 28; Jeffrey, 24; and Douglas, 22.

Barbara Masters Laird is another old Washington hand. Her husband, Melvin, named secretary of defense, has been a representative from Wisconsin for 16 years. A wife of 23 years, Mrs. Laird once admitted she knew nothing about politics, but a friend says that doesn't matter. "She has such a good sense of humor that she won't be rattled at whatever happens," the friend said.

The Lairds have three children, John, 20; Alison, 17; and David, 14. All play the organ and Mrs. Laird is taking piano lessons.

Teacher's Assistant
A former teacher, Mrs. Laird studied psychology in college and has been working as a teacher's assistant once a week in a Maryland nursery school.

Carol Crothers Finch met her husband Robert when she asked him to a college "Backwards Dance" at Oriental College in Los Angeles where she was president of her sorority.

The Finches lived in Washington in 1947 when Finch was an aide to the then-Rep. Nixon. He has been named secretary of health, education and welfare.

The Finches were married in 1946 and have four children — Maureen, 18; Kevin, 15; Priscilla, 13; and Cathleen, 11.

Kathleen Carmody Stans missed the Cabinet-naming ceremonies. "I have the Hong Kong flu," she explained later, and when asked for information about herself, replied, "Sick, sick, sick."

Married in 1933, Mrs. Stans has accompanied her husband on several hunting trips—both as a hunter and as a photographer. She's transformed some of her trophies into a leopard coat, a zebra hat and a lion handbag.

The Stans, who have four adopted children, all grown, lived in Washington when Stans was budget director in the Eisenhower administration.

A 'Special Sort'
A friend said Mrs. Stans "is a very special sort of person, very youthful looking and it will be great to have her back."

Jennie Benedetto Volpe, 57, also missed the ceremonies because of flu.

Mrs. Volpe, a nurse who was married in 1934, once said she was "inclined to be shy," but after campaigning for her husband, she said, "I decided if 200 people came out to shake my hand, why should I be timid?"

The petite—4 foot 11—grandmother of four likes to design hats and made the one she wore to her husband's inauguration as governor of the Bay State.

Native of Alaska
Mrs. Walter J. Hickel, wife of the newly named secretary of the interior, is the daughter of a pioneer Alaska family.

A booster of her native state, Mrs. Hickel has said, "Alaskans are different people. They don't like to have people tell them what to do." The Hickels were married in 1945. Their sons are Robert, Walter Jr., Jack, Joe and Karl.

Speaks for Spouse
Lenore LaFont Romney has had her share of publicity as the wife of the governor of Michigan and once estimated she averaged five talks a week on behalf of her husband, George, named secretary of housing and urban development.

A friend described the Romneys, married in 1931, as "the most in love couple you can ever imagine."

The mother of four and grandmother of 12, Mrs. Romney, 59, a former actress, met her husband in high school and once said that when she went out with another boy he sat behind them and "crunched his popcorn all during the movie."

Be With Husband
Asked if she was looking forward to moving to Washington, Mrs. Romney said, "Any wife wants to be with her husband, wherever he is, so he can develop his creative ideas."

Katherine Archibald Blount, whose husband Winton is slated for the postmaster general's spot, is a southern belle from Union Springs, Ala., who was voted the most popular girl in high school.

The mother of five children

Winton 3rd, 24; Thomas, 23; Robert, 21; Katherine, 16; and Joseph, 12—Mrs. Blount was active in community affairs in Montgomery, Ala., where she lived on a 60-acre estate.

—Last Thanksgiving, the George P. Shultz family got an ad from a realtor who said he wanted to help them find a house in Washington.

"We laughed and laughed," says Helena Shultz, whose husband was named secretary of labor.

A World War II nurse, the soft-spoken, gray-haired Mrs. Shultz was a popular hostess in Chicago where her husband is dean of the University of Chicago graduate school of business. A friend described her as a "mother figure for the college."

Mrs. Shultz says she and her husband are "thinking seriously" about sending their younger children to public school in Washington. She says she has no hobbies "except my family," which includes Margaret, 22; Katherine, 18; Peter, 15; and Barbara, 12.

Former Beauty Queen
—Mrs. Clifford M. Hardin, the wife of the newly named secretary of agriculture, was a beauty queen when, as Martha Love Wood, she attended Purdue Teachers College.

The mother of five children, Mrs. Hardin describes her role on behalf of her husband by saying, "I help with the jokes for his speeches."

She has never lived in Washington and says, "This is going to be a new life for me. It'll be a graduate degree for me."

—Mrs. John N. Mitchell, whose husband was Nixon's law partner and has been selected as attorney general, is one of those who is house hunting. "We definitely want to live in the District (of Columbia)," she says, adding, "I love Washington."

Three Children
The former Martha Beali, Mrs. Mitchell has three children — John Jr., 27; Jill, 25; and Martha, 7. She also has two grandsons.

A graduate of the University of Miami, Mrs. Mitchell has been advised by her husband that the best thing she can do to help him is "just be sure the food is good."

—Mrs. David M. Kennedy, whose husband was named secretary of the treasury, once worked as a dime store clerk while her husband spent two years in London as a

Risks Are

In Overtrick

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD
At rubber bridge you don't waste time playing for overtricks, but in tournament bridge overtricks usually mean a championship. When today's hand was played in the Blue Ribbon Pair Championship at the national tournament a few weeks ago, most players overlooked a chance to play for an overtrick without jeopardizing the contract.

At most tables West led the ten of hearts to dummy's singleton ace. Declarer led the queen of spades for a finesse and drew two more rounds of trumps. When the hearts failed to break South had to use dummy's last trump for the seven of hearts and therefore had to give up a club trick at the end.

South should have played for the overtrick by drawing only two rounds of trumps. Declarer leads his three top hearts, discarding clubs from the dummy. South then ruffs the seven of hearts with dummy's third trump.

Ruffs Club
Declarer cashes dummy's ace of clubs, gets to his hand by ruffing a diamond, and ruffs his last club with dummy's last trump. East has to follow suit throughout, and South can then claim the last two tricks with his remaining trumps.

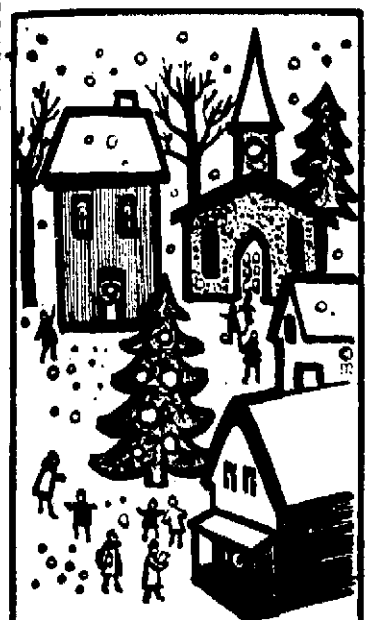

"Not so fast," you object. "You've left a trump out all this time. It happened to work this time, but what if East had been able to ruff one of those hearts? How did you know that East had five hearts?"

If it didn't matter how many hearts East had, if hearts broke well, South could draw the last trump and use dummy's fourth trump for the losing club. If hearts broke badly, East could do no damage by ruffing a heart. South would then make the rest of the tricks, ruffing a heart and a club with dummy's last two trumps.

The advantage of leaving the last trump out is that if the opponent with the last trump also has the heart length South can make an overtrick in spite of the bad break.

Writer Thinks Ann Resembles a Lamb

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN: A group of us were sitting around the other evening talking about the behavioral patterns of animals. Mr. T. said all his life he has run into people who not only look like certain animals but they possess the behavioral characteristics of those animals. I got to thinking about my own family and he is right. My sister not only looks like a cat, but she is lazy and completely selfish. My brother who bears a strong resemblance to a fox (pointed ears and reddish hair) is an extremely shrewd operator, sly and cunning. An aunt of mine looks so much like a rabbit her friends nicknamed her "Bunny." She has milk-white skin, pinkish eyes and her nose twitches constantly. (Incidentally, she had nine children.) My sister-in-law looks like a cow. She weighs at least 180 pounds and is always chewing on something. She has large brown eyes and an empty, expressionless face. Nothing, but absolutely nothing, is going on in her head.

After examining several of your pictures, Ann, I've decided you look like a lamb. I hope you don't consider this an insult. I didn't mean it that way.

Comment, please. — Brain Joggler

Dear Brain: So you think I look like a lamb, do you? Well, considering the wealth of other possibilities, I didn't come out b-a-a-a-a-a-d! Thank ewe.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a secretary in a busy, aggressive firm. We do a great deal of entertaining of executives from other cities and I am always included.

Don't get the idea I am a party girl. Nothing could be further from the truth. I'm 24 and happily married to a wonderful man. When the firm entertains, my husband is always with me. The problem is, I drink too much. I am not an alcoholic but once I get going I don't know when to stop. This has been going on for about two years.

Yesterday I found out for sure that I am pregnant. Both my husband and I are thrilled. I don't want my husband to know it but I am worried about whether or not my drinking will affect the unborn child. I am in good health and have never been sick except for the hangovers. Please tell me what your medical consultants say about this. — Pink and Blue

Dear P and B: A pregnant woman who drinks instead of eating could injure her unborn child by robbing that child of proper nutrition. Talk to your obstetrician about your drinking and take his advice. If you have a tendency to get as stiff as your letter indicates, he might suggest you put the cork in the bottle for the duration of your pregnancy. Failing is

Brownies Take Gift Caravan to Mission School

The St. Anthony Mission School at Neopit was the destination Saturday for a 25-car caravan of Brownies from McKinley, St. Thomas More, Richmond, Jackson, Franklin, Columbus, St. Pius, St. Therese and St. Bernadette schools.

The Brownies brought food baskets, toys, stockings stuffed with gifts and a mitten tree to youngsters at the school. The purpose was to provide a Merry Christmas for others less fortunate. In doing so, the Brownies fulfilled their service project for the year and gained a better understanding of service on the Junior Scout level.

St. Pius troops 256 and 94 sponsored the mitten tree. Franklin troop 224 stuffed 60 stockings with donations by North Side Grocers and Fairlane Store; all other troops donated food baskets and toys.

After the presentation of Christmas gifts, punch and cookies were served.

Having charge of the event were Mrs. Gerald Wolgramm, leader, and Mrs. David Meyer, co-leader.

Lines in one of Ann Landers' answers in the Saturday, Nov. 30 Post-Crescent were inadvertently transposed. The following letter and answer appear as they should have been.

she was the only person present who did not take a drink.

Her "holier-than-thou" attitude irritated many of the women. One gal said, "Your letter and answer appear as if a friend could have accepted a cocktail and held it in her hand."

Dear Rock: I do not share your view that it is essential to have a cocktail in order to be sociable. And I've never been very good at pretending.

To drink or not to drink is a highly personal decision. I've made mine and I'm willing to let others make theirs. Many people can have a cocktail without getting slopped to the eyeballs. For the person who doesn't know when to stop, I figure it's his stomach, his liver, and his hangover.

Date Set for School Vote

$1.5 Million Issue For Elementary to be Decided Jan. 28

KAUKAUNA — A referendum on a $1.5 million bond issue for a northside elementary school will be held Jan. 28, the school district fiscal control board decided Monday.

Members left it up to individual communities to decide whether to have an election in their district or to join with another district for voting. A vote must be taken before Feb. 5, since that is when bids already received for construction will expire.

Earlier this year, an advisory school referendum held in Kaukauna was approved almost two to one. The fiscal control board approved a $1.5 million bond issue after this vote.

Some citizens opposed to the building filed a petition asking for another referendum on the bond issue. Fiscal control board members spent considerable time reviewing plans for the proposed school although it was aired extensively at three previous meetings.

The proposed northside school would be for children from kindergarten age through sixth grade, an area where school officials indicate there is considerable overcrowding. The district currently is renting seven classrooms from parochial schools and churches in Kaukauna for the younger students.

Lutheran Pupils Christmas Eve Program Tonight

KIMBERLY — The Christian Day School children of Mount Calvary Lutheran Church will present a program, "The Cross In The Christmas Tree," at 6:30 p.m. today at the church.

Youngsters will be directed by Verlyn Fuhrmann, Mrs. Eugene Van Handel and Mrs. Robert Eberhardt. A single worship service by the Rev. Raymond Frey, pastor, will be held at 9 a.m. Christmas day.

A 7:30 p.m. candlelight service will be held today at the First Presbyterian Church and parishoners will join with an Appleton parish for services on Christmas day.

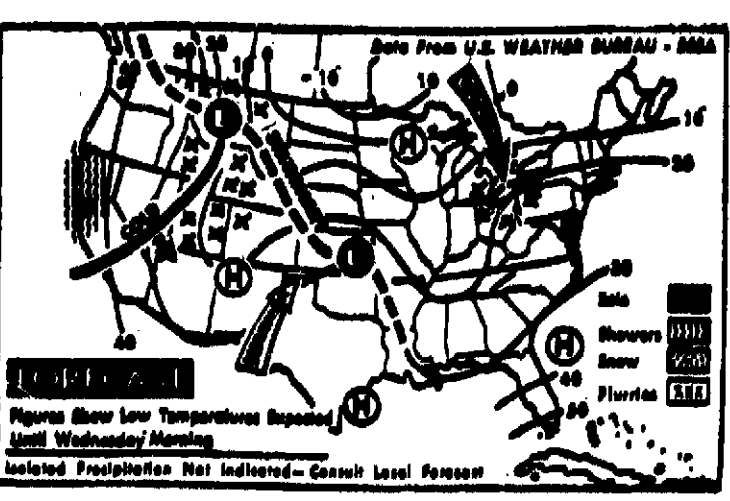

Ex-Appleton Man Held In Robbery

JEFFERSON, Wis. — A former Appleton man is being held in the Jefferson County jail under $4,000 bond awaiting a preliminary hearing on an armed robbery charge.

Marvin C. Mauthe, 33, Watertown, will have a preliminary hearing in Jefferson County Court on Dec. 31. He was found indigent Monday and an attorney was appointed for him.

Mauthe, who left Appleton about a year ago, was taken into custody early Saturday morning after allegedly staging a lone, armed holdup at a Johnson Creek tavern about midnight Friday.

Jefferson County authorities said Mauthe got about $750 after pulling a revolver on the bartender. He was found at another tavern about two miles south of Johnson Creek, which is eight miles south of Watertown.

Snow Flurries Are forecast tonight for the northern half of the Rockies and the eastern Great Lakes region. Showers are forecast for northern California. It will turn colder along the East Coast and warmer from the central and southern Rockies through the southern and central Plains states. (AP Wirephoto Map)

Anti-Pollution Bond Legislation Readied

Plan Would Free $200 Million For Treatment Plant Building

MADISON — Legislation is being prepared for the legislature early next year to speed up the lagging construction of local sewage treatment and pollution control facilities. The present program—ORAP—would prove $200 million to 100—is seven years old and is funded by a penny a pack tax on cigarettes sold in the state.

Gov. Warren P. Knowles said. Knowles urged several weeks ago the state add $144 million to a proposed $56 million bonding legislation which would create a program. Under his plan, communities would be paid direct grants of more than 50 per cent during the balance of fiscal year. He has asked for ORAP task force support. A recent state report to the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration outlined 400 projects for improving or expanding sewage treatment plants located in the Lake Michigan basin in Wisconsin, plus additions to remove 80 per cent of the phosphates in these plants, at a total cost of $211 million.

Under the original program, He urged the move in line federal reimbursement would amount to $105.5 million, or 50 per cent, plus state support of $52.5 million, or 25 per cent.

Grand Chute's 1968 Tax Rate Set at $22.75

Without Reassessment, Hike Would be $59 Per $1,000

Using its recently completed full value reassessment, the Town of Grand Chute Monday night set the 1968 tax rate at $22.75 per $1,000 on a total assessment of $72,213,377.

This compares with the 1967 rate of $50.50 per $1,000 on an assessed valuation of $25,275,652.

If not for the reassessment, the rate would have increased $8.50, or to $59 per $1,000, Town Clerk Leslie Woldt said today.

He said 1968 taxes increased $223,037 over last year, the biggest hike being the school tax increase of $197,367. Outagamie County taxes increased $24,524 and state taxes, $1,145.

The town's equalized valuation set by the state is $73,141,630. The town now is assessed at 98.78 per cent of full value while in 1967, it was assessed at 37 per cent.

Special Assessment

The levy against the town to be paid by April, 1969, is $1,675,793, including the special assessment on the Butte Des Morts utility district.

A special assessment against property owners in the district amounts to $2 per $1,000 on a valuation of $31,622,750.

Woldt also announced the town received a state tax credit which is applied toward all town real estate and Class B personal property.

This amount to 31 cents per $1,000 or $19,910, he said. Last year, the credit was 43 cents per $1,000. Meanwhile Appleton received a state credit of $4.15 per $1,000 this year.

The breakdown in the levy against the town shows $14,628 in state taxes; $319,740 in county taxes; $1,189,094 in school taxes to the joint district in Appleton, and $17,918 in school taxes to Hortonville Joint District No. 1; vocational school tax of $70,787, including the Hortonville district and state trust fund loan, Hortonville district, $235, and Appleton district, $144.

County Tax

Money raised from taxes for the $319,740 amounts to $218,064 and the remainder, $101,655, is paid out of the general fund. The county tax is $3.04 per $1,000, including a two cents state trust fund loan tax.

The tax rate for Hortonville Joint District No. 1, Hortonville is $23.53 per $1,000, and for Appleton Joint District No. 10 in the Butte Des Morts utility district, $24.75 per $1,000. The later includes the $2 per $1,000 tax levied against property owners for operation of the district and to help defray costs of the sewage disposal plant.

Woldt said the levy on the Hortonville district is higher than Appleton's because of the higher school tax and the state trust fund loan.

The town's budget is set during the annual meeting in April.

Gifts, Cash Presented at County Home

Santa spread his cheer a bit early Monday to 350 patients at the Outagamie County Hospital and Golden Age Home.

Thousands of gifts were distributed through the hospital wards. The gifts were collected through a month-long campaign sponsored by Radio Station WHBY.

Presents to patients averaged about $6 piece, according to a hospital spokesman.

Several hundred dollars in cash that was contributed was used to buy special gifts such as clothing and a new supply of Christmas records.

Kindness of donors was especially appreciated by the approximately one-third of the patients who are classified as "forgotten," the spokesman said. These are people who have no known close relatives or friends, and many have not been remembered at holidays for many years.

Quite a few small gifts received were kept to be distributed throughout the year as prizes in games and special awards.

More Than 6,000 pounds of canned goods, double that collected last Christmas, were sorted out and packed along with a turkey and distributed to 100 needy families by Xavier students. Under the direction of the Key Club, boys canvassed their neighbor-

Police Move Seen by End Of January

Arrangements Being Made For Use of Automotive Building

The Appleton Police Department intends to move into temporary quarters by mid-January and no later than Feb. 1, Police Chief Earl O. Wolff said Monday afternoon.

Arrangements are being worked out to have the department move into the old Automotive Supply Co. building at the northwest corner of Appleton and Franklin streets.

The owners and city officials are in the process of working out a lease or sale arrangement.

The police department move is necessitated by the city selling the present police station at the southwest corner of Morrison and Washington streets to the private developer putting together the land package for a new downtown Gimbel's Department Store.

Chief Wolff said he had not made moving arrangements yet but would meet with Public Works Director Frank Keuler to see what assistance he could get.

Wolff said he has a copy of the floor plans of the three-level Automotive building, including basement, and was working on office layouts. The city has several partitions which it can erect in the building.

"There may be a parking problem for our squad cars but we should be able to work something out," Wolff told the city council's public safety committee.

Operation of Wire Works Expected to be Unchanged

Buchanan Comments on Planned Combination With New York Firm

No changes in management, operation or officers of Appleton Wire Works Corp. and International Wire Works, Menasha, will occur if the proposed combination with Albany Felt Co., Albany, N.Y., is approved.

This was the statement released this morning by William E. Buchanan Sr., president of Appleton Wire and Outagamie Corp., of which the Fox Cities plants are wholly-owned subsidiaries.

The agreement calls for exchange of one million shares of Albany Felt stock for all outstanding shares of Appleton Wire and International.

The transaction requires approval by Albany Felt shareholders and is contingent on a favorable Internal Revenue Service ruling to insure it results in a tax-free exchange of stock.

Based on Albany Felt's Friday closing in the over-the-counter market, it has been estimated the transaction involves some $40 million.

Buchanan noted Albany Felt can be classified as a closely-held company because it has a small number of stockholders and there is little trading in its stock.

Included in the transaction would be Appleton Wire's Montgomery, Ala., plant and its holdings in eight plants in

Avenue Seen As Tourists Attraction

A group of businessmen and public officials will meet Friday to drum up interest in making Appleton a special kind of tourist attraction.

The Appleton Downtown Retail Association has scheduled a noon luncheon at the Conway Motor Inn.

Its purpose, according to Louis Micheln, association secretary, is to "discuss the potential in having business and other groups throughout the United States visit Appleton and learn about the College Avenue reconstruction project and subsequent announcement by Gimbel's to construct a new department store downtown."

Micheln said it was felt the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce and Downtown Association could assist in making such visits worthwhile for the people who will take the time and effort to hear and see the "Appleton Story".

Ray Korth, 42, 821 N. Morrison St., was taken to Appleton Memorial Hospital by the fire department rescue squad about 6 p.m. Monday after he experienced difficulty breathing at his home.

Woldt said the levy on the Hortonville district is higher than Appleton's because of the higher school tax and the state trust fund loan.

The town's budget is set during the annual meeting in April.

Shoelifter Pays $50 For Food Worth $8.52

The theft of $8.52 worth of food from the Red Owl Store, 700 W. Wisconsin Ave., Saturday afternoon cost Eugene Brux, 32, 407 W. Seventh St., Appleton, $50 and costs or 12 days in jail Monday.

Appleton police said Brux, who pleaded guilty in Outagamie County Court Branch 2, stole two packages of meat, a package of cheese, and a roll of salami about 5 p.m. He put the items under his coat.

Janet Holly Is Home A Christmas Gift

Janet Holly is home for the holidays.

The little girl, found abandoned on the front seat of a cold car in the parking lot of Outagamie County Hospital the afternoon of Dec. 13, was released from Appleton Memorial Hospital Monday afternoon.

She was released to the Outagamie County Department of Social Services who immediately placed her in a "temporary foster home." Welfare workers declined to reveal the names of the foster parents.

Judge Raymond P. Dohr of the Outagamie County Juvenile Court issued the welfare agency a temporary custody order for the baby on Dec. 18.

A welfare worker said today the baby will remain in the foster home on a temporary basis until the court terminates the rights of her parents, — whoever they are. He said it has not yet been determined how long it will be before parental rights are terminated.

Sheriff's authorities are continuing the search for the infant's mother, Janet Holly, a name given the infant by nurses at Appleton Memorial Hospital, was taken to the hospital immediately after being found Dec. 13. She was in critical condition for three days after being admitted.

Alderman Wants City Hall Sold for Commercial Use

The head of the city council's public safety committee feels the Appleton City Hall should be sold to encourage a private commercial development.

Ald. John Ayers (12th) made his feelings known Monday as he suggested the money from the sale of the building and more than half block of real estate could be applied toward the cost of a new city hall building.

Ayers was hopeful the board of public works would not take action on a recent resolution by Ald. Robert Roemer (9th) asking for a study of the possible use of the Vocational Building as a future city hall, and the present city hall as a police station.

"We feel the planning for a

It is not a "give away Business Manager Clayton program," Jackson said, adding Jackson said the site would the district will have some provide a "central location" in control over the applicants, with the school district for a main- the aid of local welfare agen- tance repair shop and housing cies.

The board had previously considered leasing a building from Kampe Warehousing Inc., but after discussion with City Atty. Richard Steffens, decided it would be more economical in the long run to build its own. Jackson said the facility would require about an acre and a half site, now available near Gegan Elementary School. With the second junior high school, proposed for Midway Road, the location on Earl Street would be advantageous, Jackson said.

The next move of the board, Jackson said, would be to get an option of the land.

Junior High Tour
Turning to its proposed junior high school, the board set a definite Dec. 30 date to view new schools in the Neenah and Oshkosh areas.

Following the tour, the board will meet with planners of the architectural firm of Sauter, Seaborn, Appleton, to see sketches of the $1.8 million facility.

In other business, the board adopted a policy to provide free noon lunches to needy children. The district currently has about 20 students receiving free lunches, Jackson said.

He explained that by law the district has to have a written policy in operation by Feb. 1 or it would violate its federal aid contract.

The policy, leaves the decision by the state, leaves the decision up to the school district to deter- mine who can participate in a program.

"Basically," Jackson said, "it day.

Since the policy must be enacted by Feb. 1, Robert Farrell, board member, moved to adopt it and then review the operation in six months.

A final decision on the substitute teacher pay rate will be left up to the school's personnel committee, board members de- cided.

Instead of setting a definite date for the number of days a substitute teacher works, the board recommended a mini- mum $20 per day rate and subsequent increases to be de- termined by the personnel com- mittee.

Current rates are $18 per day, $20 per day after five consecu- tive days, and $25 to $27.50 per day after five consecutive days, and $25 to $27.50 per day beyond 20 days.

In other action the board: —Hired an elementary art coordinator and teacher to fill resignations.

—Decided to meet with Wil- liam Strek, Director, Vocational, Technical and Adult Education, District 12, to view building plans of VTE-12.

—Gave the administration au- thority to hire three secre- taries.

—Transferred $13,840 from the Gegan Elementary School construction fund for payment of architectural fees for the remodeling of the high school.

Walkout at Central Paper Strikers Take Christmas Break

MENASHA — Striking em- ployes of Central Paper Com- pany planned to put away their placards and go home tonight as they ended their eighth day on the picket line. But, according to George Kallin, Jr., president of Local 727, United Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Christmas Eve cessation of picketing will extend only through Christ- mas day and the union mem- bers will be walking the lines outside the plant again Thurs- day at 6 a.m.

The company's first strike began on Monday, Dec. 16, and there remained no sign of willingness on the part of union or company to return to the bargaining table today.

The plant at Fourth and Manitowoc streets was closed down today and a company spokesman was unavailable for comment.

Police, Fire Negotiations At Showdown

Memberships Being Polled on Offers By Menasha Officials

MENASHA — Firemen meet Thursday night to decide whether to accept a city offer for next year's pay and benefit rates, while policemen's associ- ation negotiators today doubted the likelihood of settlement as they polled members by tele- phone.

The two bargaining teams met separately Monday night with the common council public safety committee and other aldermen. While there tentatively appeared to be agreement on three of five items concerning firemen's benefits, police nego- tiators and city officials were unable to bridge a seemingly small gap between policemen's demands and the city's offer.

Patrolman Roy Rollins, presi- dent of Menasha Professional Policemen's Association Local 34, said this morning the situ- ation was termed a stalemate by at least one alderman, and policemen mentioned the possi- bility of seeking factfinding by state employment relations agents if the differences cannot be settled.

In both cases, the city's offer includes full payment of pension fund contributions by the city. To enforce such an agreement next year, however, the council must formally approve and notify the state officials in charge of the municipal employee re- tirement fund before Jan. 1.

If the two union groups accept the offer, Mayor John Klein said he would call a special council meeting for Friday night to approve the measure. While a spokesman for the firemen said his group appeared likely to accept the offer, Rollins said the police bargaining team felt the city was using "pressure" through the short time span remaining.

While the firemen plan to meet Thursday night, Rollins said policemen were being pol- led by telephone rather than in person.

Trials for Indigents Cost of Defense

OSHKOSH — The cost of trials for indigents in Winne- bago County during 1968 er- mated about the same as 1967 leading officials to be- lieve that a public defender is not merited at this time.

During this year, the county spent $12,687 in 51 cases for men and women unable to pay their own court fees.

This is considerably less than an estimated $50,000 it would cost to hire a public defender for these people, a spokesman from the district attorney's office said today.

"An attorney is appointed for a person charged with crimes which could result in six months or more in jail," William Carver, assistant- district attorney explained. "I would say that we are operat- ing far below what it would cost to have a public defend- er, which would cost at least $50,000 a year, including the man, his staff and the neces- sary office space."

The fees paid for the 51 indigents included charges for attorney fees, pre-trial con- ference preparation and the trials. Most of them were before Judge James G.

Sarres, county court branch II.

The largest single bill was for $1,656 and the second highest $965, for services in the defense of Richard Plette and John W. Russell, Mena- sha, in the attempted burglar- izing of Tiger Lynn's, Mena- sha.

Attorney Robert Henke, Neenah, defended Russell and Plette and corporation counsel Gerald Engeldinger is filing an application for review of the charges in County Court Branch III early in January. This opens the way for bills to be changed or referred to a higher court, according to Engeldinger.

NEW YORK (AP) — Heard right. — In a pig's eye he is! any good double talk lately? "I know that in a real emergency you're the only one I really can count on." — That's why I am so afraid of emergencies.

Some people are born double talkers. Some achieve skill in it only after long years of practice. But it has become so widespread and accepted that it would be difficult for anyone, even if he talked only to himself, to go through a day without employing double talk.

For the benefit of the uninitiated, here are some typical examples of double talk—followed in each case by the literal translation of what the speaker actually was thinking:

"Well, after all, Christmas is for children." — So don't forget your baby, Sugar Daddy.

"It isn't the value of the gift that counts, but the spirit of the giver." — Bu how can anybody show much spirit if he gives you something that is worth nothing?

Bum Hairdresser
—What a divine coiffure. Wilma. You simply must tell me who your hairdresser is. — I want to be sure the bum never gets a chance to work on my locks.

"So what's new with you?" — Don't start telling me your troubles: I've got plenty of my own to worry about.

"If you don't see it, because if you can't see it, I probably can't find it either."

"The customer is always right." — In a pig's eye he is! "I know that in a real emergency you're the only one I really can count on." — That's why I am so afraid of emergencies.

"Will all you passengers kindly move to the rear of the bus, please." — Or, better yet, open the windows and jump out.

"I certainly do believe it's a worthy charity, but I already gave at the office." — Let me think, when was that—five years ago last July?

"It isn't whether you win or lose that counts—it's how you play the game." — All that counts is whether you win.

"Of course, I was only thinking out loud, so to speak." — Why did I have to open my big trap in the first place?

"This department welcomes constructive suggestions of any kind." — Be sure and drop yours in the wastebasket on the way out.

Marry for Money
—I know, Reginald, that you couldn't be marrying that girl simply for her money. — Her father must own a liquor store, too.

"In this course your final grade will depend strictly on the literary merits of your term papers." — I throw them all downstairs and the one that goes the farthest gets the best grade.

"That miniskirt sure does reveal your charming peekaboo knees, Mabel." — If the elm tree in our front yard was that knobby, I'd call in a tree surgeon.

"I don't know when I've had a more interesting time in my life than serving as your PTA president during the current year." — Unless it was that time in college when I came down with both mumps and mononucleosis.

"I admit that the starting pay on this job is small, but you will find it has other compensations." — For one thing, the hours are so long that you'll find you won't have enough strength left to spend the money you do get.

"We like to think of ourselves as just one big happy team." — But don't forget that I'm the coach, Buster.

"We must get together again real soon." — You get together with your friends, and I'll get together with mine.

Truck Strikes Squad Car in New London

Two Accidents Blamed on Bad Driving Conditions

NEW LONDON — Road conditions contributed to two accidents in the city, including one involving a police squad car.

More than $100 damage resulted to the squad car at 2:45 p.m. Friday on S. Pearl Street.

According to the police report the squad car driven by Sgt. Richard P. Fritz, 31, 516 E. Quincy St., was headed north on Pearl Street and stopped in traffic to allow a vehicle to back into a parking stall. A truck driven by John H. Prinsen, 60, route 3, was unable to stop in time and struck the police car in the rear.

Neither driver was injured. No injuries resulted in a line of traffic crash at 2:45 p.m. Friday at Mill and Douglas streets.

Hortonville Woman

City police said cars driven by Mary A. Morack, 31, route 1, Hortonville, and John L. Le Noble, 33, 903 Smith St., were traveling south on Mill Street and stopped in traffic, both vehicles started out and the Morack vehicle again stopped because of traffic. The Le Noble car was unable to stop and struck the rear of the Morack vehicle.

Damage to the vehicles was estimated at more than $100. James P. Patriotto, 32, 504 E. Cook St., reported to police at 12:40 a.m. Saturday that his car had been struck while parked in an alley west of the 200 block of S. Pearl Street. The right front door of the 1967 model car was damaged.

10 Stranded Fishermen Pulled Off Ice

CHILTON — Ten ice fishermen were pulled off Lake Winnebago about 8 a.m. Sunday after a 40-foot wide crack opened.

Charles Lisowe, operator of a fishing establishment at Quincy, and two unidentified companions took a boat from a nearby fishing club and made three trips to rescue the stranded fishermen.

A fisherman from Pipe was walking out when the crack opened about one-quarter mile from shore. He returned for help.

Most of the men reportedly were from Kaukauna and Potter. Their equipment remained on the ice.

Strong winds have caused the ice to continue shifting. Lisowe reported that ice is about five inches thick on the Quincy shore. Fishing remains good, and many fishermen have been walking out on the ice.

Valley Officials Are Given Positions With Municipalities League

MADISON — James Coughlin, Winneconne village president and head of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, has appointed Mayor Donald A. Tillemann of Green Bay and Mayor John Klein of Menasha as members of the executive committee of the League for two-year terms.

Among the district vice presidents of the League appointed for the next year are Village President William Rickard of Valders, Mayor Clarence Wolf of Brillion, Mayor Lloyd E. Matheson of Waupaca, Mayor Donald Hassler of Neenah, and Mayor Ruben A. Krause of Antigo.

$22.75 Forfeited by Brookfield Driver

CLINTONVILLE — Philip P. Murphy, 51, Brookfield, paid $22.75 in fines and court costs when he pleaded guilty by stipulation last week to a speeding charge.

Murphy was arrested and charged with going 39 miles per hour in a 25 m.p.h. zone Dec. 3.

We wish you all a MERRY CHRISTMAS

Lori Christianson Asked Santa for many of the things any five-year-old girl would like for Christmas — a doll, clothes, and stuff like that. But more than anything else, Lori would like to wake up Christmas morning and find she has her five front teeth.

After all, how is one to eat Christmas candy — to say nothing of talking without a lithp — with too many teeth mithing. Lori, a kindergarten pupil at Richmond School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Christianson, 1514 E. College Ave.

Appleton Youth Arraigned on 6 Traffic Counts

Joseph M. VanderHeyden, 17, 1899 E. Wisconsin Ave., was arraigned in Outagamie County Court Branch 2 Friday on six traffic charges brought by Appleton police.

He pleaded guilty to an automatic signal violation at Wisconsin Avenue and Oneida Street about 7 p.m. Dec. 7.

VanderHeyden pleaded no contest to five counts stemming from a chase by police about 4:15 a.m. Dec. 8. He was charged with attempting to elude police, speeding 70 miles per hour in a 25 zone on W. Seymour Street, and with three counts of going through stop signs at Oneida and Seymour streets, Oneida and Hoover streets, and Memorial Drive and Seymour Street.

Judge Nick F. Schaefer withheld a ruling after the youth entered no contest pleas. The judge released VanderHeyden to the custody of his father and continued the case to Dec. 27 to allow time for consultation with the city attorney's office.

New London Library To Close on Holidays

NEW LONDON — The library will be closed Tuesday and Wednesday in observance of Christmas and Dec. 31 and New Year's Day, Mrs. John Bermann has announced.

The library will be open at regular times other days.

Forest, Florence Counties Planning Will Begin For Public Housing

CRANDON — The Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission has been asked to begin immediately preparing the planning prerequisites for public housing in Forest and Florence counties.

Officials of the counties last week asked the regional planning commission for a "working agreement" in which it would help the counties comply with federal requirements for public housing funds.

William Morris, executive director of the regional planning commission, informed officials of the need for urgent action, and outlined alternatives, including doing nothing.

Inevitable Need "To do nothing," he warned, "would delay the inevitable need for this planning work and it would assuredly be more costly and the need more critical later on."

Officials of the counties will learn more details of the planning early next year when Morris further explains a housing program for the two northern member counties of the commission.

To Avoid Expulsion

Compromise Was Proposed

OSHKOSH — A compromise plan designed to avoid mass expulsions of Negro students from Oshkosh State University was delivered to the school's president Thursday for relay to the Board of Regents, a Negro faculty member said Friday night.

The regents apparently voted to expel 90 Negro students from the school Friday without having considered the plan, according to James McKee, Negro coordinator of the school's program for the "culturally distinct."

"Dr. Guiles gave no recommendations to us one way or the other," said W. Roy Kopp, vice chairman of the state university system's Board of Regents. "No. No."

Dr. Roger Guiles is president of Oshkosh State, which was left with only 17 of its 111 Negro students after the regents' action.

Received Impression "He gave the impression he would present the recommendation to the regents," said McKee.

McKee, in fact, said he believed Guiles had forwarded the recommendation.

The plan, McKee said, would have temporarily reinstated all 94 Negro students under suspension since a turbulent demonstration damaged the school's administration building Nov. 21.

The five charged the administration has "totally and completely abdicated all of its legitimate authority with respect to student disciplinary procedures" by permitting the Wisconsin State University Board of Regents to handle the matter.

They contended the hearings conducted for the regents should have been held on campus instead of at the courthouse where the students' civil trials also will be held.

McKee said the plan would allow review of each individual's record.

"The plan called for looking at each kid's record, and if the kid appeared to be a student, he could be given an opportunity to remain in school on a probationary basis," McKee said.

McKee, 27, one of two U.S. Negroes on the faculty of the 11,000-student university, said the plan was presented by the faculty's Advisory Committee.

'Authoritarian Tactics' Hit By Professors

OSHKOSH — Five Oshkosh State University faculty members have called upon the university faculty and students to "demonstrate our opposition to the authoritarian tactics employed by the administration of WSU-O to settle the current problems."

In an open letter to the faculty, the five charged "censorship of faculty and student mail, intimidation of faculty members, unwarranted and irrelevant inquiries into the 'characteristics' of students and arbitrary imposition of new regulations affecting the faculty and students."

The five charged the administration has "totally and completely abdicated all of its legitimate authority with respect to student disciplinary procedures" by permitting the Wisconsin State University Board of Regents to handle the matter.

They contended the hearings conducted for the regents should have been held on campus instead of at the courthouse where the students' civil trials also will be held.

for the Culturally Distinct to offer the regents "another option rather than simply readmittance or expulsion."

"It got across the idea that there were other alternatives," McKee said.

McKee said he presented the recommendation to Guiles Thursday afternoon and the president's reaction seemed favorable.

"He said, 'This looks pretty good,'" McKee said.

McKee, obviously taken back by the expulsion order, said: "I'm not together enough to make a rational comment."

Asked if the report might have resulted in different action by the regents, Kopp replied: "I don't think so. The only question before us was what action to take on the basis of the charges, the hearing on those charges. Any other comment would have had no bearing on our decision."

Telephone Firm Seeks Rate Hike For Fremont Area

MADISON — The Weyauwega Telephone Company wants to raise rates at its exchange in Fremont, starting about Feb. 25 to coincide with the completion of plant improvements that will enable all urban and rural subscribers to have one-party service on or before that time.

The Public Service Commission is examining the application and will set a hearing time.

Clintonville Church Program Rescheduled

CLINTONVILLE — The Children's Christmas Eve service of the St. Paul Lutheran Church will be 6 p.m. Tuesday at the Veterans Memorial Building.

This is a change from the previously announced time of 5:30 p.m.

Wallace Backers May Form Party

Recognition No Problem, Leader Says

BY CLIFF MILLER Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MILWAUKEE — A leader in the Wisconsin presidential campaign of George C. Wallace expects that the organization will seek recognition as a formal political party, possibly early next year.

Edward S. Friend, who served as coordinator of Wallace campaign activities in the three Milwaukee congressional districts, said it is too early to speak specifically about the expected new party, but he said it was "always the intention" that the Wallace organization would file as a formal party after last November's election.

He said in a telephone interview he believed Wallace supporters probably would get together sometime early next year to discuss their next moves.

Cites Requirements Friend said he foresees no difficulty in winning formal recognition of the group as a party. Commenting on state statutes setting requirements for forming political parties, Friend said, "It is almost as if they were written for our group."

The statutes require only that a political organization must have had an independent candidate on the ballot and won 1 percent or more of the total popular vote. Wallace captured more than 7 percent of the total Presidential vote in November.

The statute provides that a separate primary and general election ballot shall be provided for a group meeting the 1 percent requirement, and the chairman and secretary of the organization shall certify the name of the new party with the secretary of state.

Who the officers of the new party would be is one of many questions that will have to wait until after the leaders get together next year. But, Lloyd Herbstreith, an Oshkosh advertising firm executive who led the Wallace campaign effort in Wisconsin, has ruled himself out of a major role in the new party, at least for now.

Herbstreith said he had spent considerable time away from his business during the campaign and now feels he should concentrate on catching up.

Other unanswered questions at this point include how soon the new party will file with the secretary of state, whether it will be affiliated with a national organization or similar parties in other states and at what levels it might attempt to have its candidates elected.

Foundation First Asked about the possibility of a link between the Wisconsin party and Wallace's American Independent Party headquartered in Montgomery, Ala., Friend said, "I don't believe that was ever really contemplated."

He said such a move would have to come after state organizations have been formed. "You have got to build the foundation before you build the first floor," he said.

The Montgomery headquarters, according to reports, has been winding up its post-campaign affairs in preparation for closing down completely, at least for the time being. In several states, however, American Independent Party or kindred organizations have been officially organized. In others, similarly to Wisconsin, spots would be reserved for the Wallace organizations on the next presidential ballots, simply on the basis of the former Alabama governor's showing last November.

Concerning the timing of the Wisconsin group's move to file as a party, Friend said, "There

Area Mayors

Valley Officials Get Key League Positions

Several Fox Valley officials have been picked to serve on key boards and committees of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities during the coming year. The appointments were announced today by League President James P. Coughlin of Winneconne.

Mayors John L. Klein, Menasha, and Donald A. Tillemann, Green Bay, will be serving on the executive committee for two-year terms. Among the League's district vice presidents are: Mayor Clarence Wolf, Brillion; Mayor Lloyd Matheson, Waupaca; Francis W. Spangle, village president, North Fond du Lac; and Mayor Donald Hassler, Neenah.

Serving on the executive committee from this area is City Manager Angus Crawford of Oshkosh. Newly appointed members of the committee on finance and taxation — two subjects getting close attention these days on the state and local levels — include: Mayor Robert Rand, Manitowish; Frank A. Sinkewicz, Clintonville; and Tillemann, Green Bay; and Marvin Schumacher, Village of Combined Locks trustee.

Mayor Joseph Browne, Sheboygan, was appointed to the League's highway committee. City Clerk R.V. Hauser of Neenah is chairman of the organization's election administrative committee. Clifford A. Centen, Green Bay clerk; and William S. Martin, Kewaskum village commissioner are also members.

Conflicting Forecasts Stymie Progress at King Army Home

MADISON — Puzzled by conflicting forecasts about the future growth of the veterans' home at King near Waupaca, a cautious building commission has withheld its endorsement of a request by the State Department of Veterans Affairs for a $3,125,000 funding authorization for the construction of a new 125-bed hospital there.

But the commission, in preparing capital fund requests for the consideration of the new legislature, promised to review the statistical projections and assured John Moses, department director, that if his own forecasts can be validated, the hospital project will be approved, perhaps in the succeeding biennium.

The home has a population that varies from 500 to 600 men and women. Dependents of war service veterans are eligible as residents. Moses has predicted the total will reach 1,500 in about five years.

But the board had before it a considerably more conservative projection of future admissions, and members told Moses that they could not approve his proposal until the differences are reconciled.

Moses called the estimates by the board's staff "totally unrealistic."

One of the uncertainties in the situation is calculating the number of World War II veterans of the state, whose average age is now about 48 years, who may apply for admission at the home in the future. World War I veterans are now given preference.

Moses said the institution is now operating with a 40-year-old 96-bed hospital that is used only for acutely ill patients.

Board members also said the department should study the feasibility of using other hospitals in the neighborhood, such as Waupaca, on a fee basis. The board approved the construction of six new duplex cottages for home residents, but cut back the cost authorization from a suggested $240,000 to $180,000, and approved $453,000 in miscellaneous projects at the institution.

Although Motorists and Homeowners might despair at the ever increasing mounds of snow facing them, there is another side of winter sometimes forgotten in the hustle and bustle of pre-Christmas activities such as this perfectly snow-flocked pine tree. The playground equipment, meanwhile, has no takers and awaits another season. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Members of the city council's residents for rescue squad calls, public safety committee met at it invested in a new carrier city hall Monday afternoon and which is equipped as an ambulance. A price boost was due.

However, they took no official action, pending a report on the rescue unit calls over the past 12-month period by Fire Chief Roland Kuehl.

Earlier in the year the city decided to charge patients for being transported to hospitals or clinics the same price levied by the city's two private ambulance services.

City Competition Ald. John Ayers (12th), committee chairman, said since then the private operators have boosted their prices and he did not think the city should be in competition by charging a lower fee.

Ayers said he recently talked with Chief Kuehl and was told the number of rescue squad calls had not decreased since the city put on the charge. "I think we ought to kick up

No Complaints

It was pointed out that since the city started to charge the city started to charge.

Firemen assigned to the rescue squad receive special training.

"During the trial period in which we started to levy a cost, there have been no complaints from the public," Ayers said.

Assistant Fire Chief Harold Kramer reminded the committee the patient has the option to be transported by private ambulance if he or she desires.

At one time the committee contemplated recommending an ordinance to the council regulating private ambulance services. However, aldermen said they did not think the need existed now because "it appears private operators are doing a good job with Chief Kuehl and was told and getting along together."

The rate increase for the rescue squad will probably be taken up at the next public safety committee meeting.

Canada, Latin America, Australia and Mexico.

"This combination of Albany Felt and Appleton Wire has appealed to me because we are non-competitive in our products," Buchanan said.

He added, "Yet together we should be able to better serve the changing needs of our customers in the clothing of all sections of the paper machine because of our different types of facilities and capabilities."

An Albany Felt spokesman noted Monday the companies will cover all sections of the clothing of the paper machine. The companies will complement each other, he said.

Albany Felt, which has 20 plants throughout the world, had 1967 sales of $50.6 million. It also produces woven industrial belts and other industrial and specialized textiles.

Appleton Wire, founded in 1895, is owned on a 50-50 basis by the Buchanan and Purdy families, and produces plastics and wire clothing for the paper machine, as does International.

International was purchased by Appleton Wire in 1955 after which both became subsidiaries of the Outagamie Corp. International is in the midst of an expansion program.

Driver of Fire Truck Injured In Collision

The driver of an Appleton Fire Department aerial truck suffered a left arm abrasion when the truck struck the side of a car about 8:50 p.m. Monday in the 100 block of W. College Avenue.

Appleton police said that Arlin E. Johnson, 33, 2825 Brookdale Court, was en route to a fire at 634 W. Prospect Ave. when the accident occurred.

Johnson was westbound on College Avenue, with red lights and siren operating on the truck. He attempted to cross over a snowbank in the middle of the street in order to get around stopped cars when the truck glanced off the bank and into the side of a car driven by Warren W. Mueller, 20, 309 S. Weimer St., who was stopped.

Police said there was a hard crust on the snow bank. Traffic was heavy at the time of the accident, they explained. The left side of Mueller's 1966 auto was extensively damaged. There was no damage to the 1946 fire truck Johnson was treated at Appleton Memorial Hospital. No charges were brought as a result of the mishap.

Firemen Called When Lint in Dryer Ignites

Four units of the Appleton Fire Department were dispatched to 634 W. Prospect Ave. about 8:40 p.m. Monday when lint ignited in an automatic dryer.

Firemen said the apartment house is owned by William Christensen, 2724 E. Hietspas St.

Happy Birthday, Kristin Merry

Kristin Merry (which is Merry, Kirstin if you say it the legal way) arrived three weeks late or two days early, depending on how you look at it.

The first child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Merry, 2323 Southwood Drive, was born 12:25 a.m. Monday at Appleton Memorial Hospital.

The little girl weighed 8 pounds, 8 1/2 ounces.

Although the name sounds something like "Merry Christmas," Mrs. Merry indicated that she and her husband had the name picked out long before the baby came. "It was three weeks overdue," she added.

Although the name may be not have been chosen because of the season, it is related. Experts on such matters say that Kristin is a feminine form of the male name Christian—which does have something to do with Christmas.

Appleton YMCA Plans Family Swim Class

A parent-child swim program will be offered by the Appleton YMCA, beginning Jan. 7.

Instructions for both will be offered from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Tuesdays and Wednesdays and from 10 to 10:45 a.m. and 2.15 to 3 p.m. Thursdays.

A parent must accompany each child and must be a full member of the YMCA.

was part of the over-all tavern operation there.

On Dec. 14 a 21-year-old dancer from Detroit paid a $100 fine on a disorderly conduct charge stemming from her "topless" dance at The Embers early the morning of Oct. 6. Two detectives made the arrests while making routine tavern checks about 12:40 a.m.

Michiels also was arrested for allowing an entertainer to perform in the barroom area in violation of a city ordinance and after a series of legal delays and entanglements, the charge was dismissed.

On Sept. 8 of this year an off-duty detective arrested a 19-year-old entertainer at The Embers, charging her with violation of the B-girl ordinance. When she failed to appear in court, a bench warrant was issued for her arrest. It has not been served because the whereabouts of the entertainer is unknown according to police.

Extended Low Rate Calling Periods Go Into Effect Jan. 1

Extended low rate calling periods for long distance calls placed within Wisconsin will go into effect Jan. 1, 1969, providing a savings of $400,000 annually, the Wisconsin Telephone Co. announced today.

Under the revised calling period schedule, evening and night rates within Wisconsin will be extended to conform with interstate calling hours. Evening rates will begin at 5 p.m. instead of 6 p.m., and night rates will be in effect from 7 p.m. until 7 a.m. Monday through Friday. Presently, night rates are in effect from 8 p.m. to 4:30 a.m.

In addition, the company said the low rates will be extended to include all day Saturday and the holidays of Thanksgiving, Fourth of July and Labor Day. Night rates will continue to apply on Sunday and on Christmas and New Year's.

The "Family Visit Plan," providing ten minutes of calling for the price of five minutes, and two minutes for the price of one after ten minutes, will continue to apply from 8 p.m. to 4:30 a.m. every day, plus all day Sunday.

Girl Slightly Hurt In 2-Car Accident

Patricia A. Fuller, 5, suffered a bump on the head in a two-car accident Monday morning at N. Rankin Street and E. Woodland Avenue.

She was in a car driven by Bridget A. Fuller, 1826 E. Lindbergh St., who was southbound on Rankin Street when she collided with an eastbound truck driven by Paul D. Grishaber, 56, 711 S. Telulah Ave. Police said his truck had a snowplow on the front.

Fire Damage Minor at Village Supper Club

Women Charged With Writing Worthless Checks

Two young Appleton women charged in connection with an alleged worthless check writing spree entered innocent pleas in Outagamie County Court Branch 2 Monday.

Kay A. Van Denzen, 20, 1418 E. Fremont St., will stand trial April 12 on three charges of issuing worthless checks at the H. C. Prange Co. Appleton police said she passed two $50 checks and one $20 check on Nov. 29 and Nov. 30.

Sandra Dartsch, 22, 111 1/2 W. Wisconsin Ave., pleaded innocent to two counts of obtaining title to the property of another by false representation.

Appleton police allege she purchased a mixer at K mart and a portable stereo record player at Treasure Island Dec. 1, with worthless checks, then returned the items to the respective stores for cash refunds.

Judge Nick F. Schaefer set her trial for April 14. Mrs. Dartsch was taken into custody in Kenosha Friday.

New Vice Presidents Three Promoted by Menasha Paper Firm

MENASHA — Election of named sales manager for the three new vice presidents has been announced by the John Strange Paper Company. The new officers are H. E. Gschwind, vice president, sales-paperboard division; John K. Sattler, vice president, Appleton manufacturing division; and Thomas F. Frawley, vice president, marketing, Appleton division.

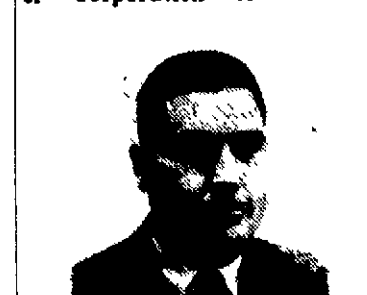

Frawley

Sattler, vice president, sales-paperboard division; John K. Gschwind, vice president, Appleton manufacturing division; and Thomas F. Frawley, vice president, marketing, Appleton division.

Sattler

Gschwind

Sattler attended Ripon College and served three years in the Air Force.

Gschwind joined the firm as production manager of the Appleton manufacturing division in 1965. He had been employed previously for five years at the Kimberly Mill of Kimberly-Clark Corporation.

Graduated with Honors
He graduated with honors in chemical engineering from the University of Notre Dame in 1956 and spent the next four years in the Navy.

Frawley joined the parent company through the merger with Appleton Manufacturing Company in 1966. He served in the posts of sales manager, vice president and director after beginning with the Appleton firm in 1953. He is a graduate of Notre Dame.

Driver Hurt Slightly as Truck Skids Into Ditch

Clyde B. Hime, 40, Oxford, Iowa, suffered bumps and bruises but did not require hospitalization when the semi-tractor he was driving jackknifed on icy pavement and went into the ditch along U. S. 41 at Outagamie County Trunk JJ, 2 1/4 miles north of Kaukauna, Monday.

Outagamie County police said the truck was southbound on 41. There was $700 damage to the right rear of the tractor.

Christmas Spirits

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Police Chief Jimmy James announced Monday that anyone who overloads on bottled spirits during the holiday can "just call the police station and we'll send a patrol car around." He said police will drive drinkers home and no arrests will be made.

GREETINGS

May every joy and blessing of this holy season come to you and your loved ones, bringing peace and happiness... making hearts and spirits bright. Merry Christmas!

Don't be Trapped by Chain Referral Rackets

BY SYLVIA PORTER

Let's say a salesman appears at your door and describes a unique deal under which you can acquire a new central vacuum cleaning system at no cost to you. While the price of the system is put at $799, the salesman explains that you can get it free simply by referring friends and neighbors to him as prospective customers who also will be offered the same deal on the same basis.

You'll get the vacuum cleaning system "free" because, you are told, you'll get a fat commission for each friend or neighbor you recommend. In fact, you might make hundreds of dollars on top of the price of the cleaner.

If this tempts you, beware! If you fall for a scheme such as this, you may lose hundreds, even thousands, of dollars. To be painfully specific:

Americans are now losing the staggering sum of $200 million a year in "chain referral" sales schemes, raising this to among the top rackets in the U.S. today.

— Right now, the U.S. Post Office is investigating no fewer than 89 chain referral schemes, some operating across the land.

— Chain referral selling is regarded as postal fraud by the post office.

— State after state (the latest being Minnesota) has declared chain referral plans illegal because of the tremendous part that chance plays in success.

— State after state (the latest being Minnesota) has declared chain referral plans illegal because of the tremendous part that chance plays in success.

live to advertising. In a word-of-mouth sales campaign.

You are urged to get started at once earning commissions for your referrals. All you need do is make a down payment and sign a paper confirming the deal.

But, the form you sign may be an ironclad contract which the salesman will sell to a financial institution. You'll be legally obligated to pay the amount stated in the contract. In one recent case, in which a team of chain referral salesmen were sentenced to prison, victims paid as much as $25 to $30 a yard for carpeting originally costing only $5 to $7 a yard.

Over and beyond the pitfall of the contract, the giant hurdle is referring the required number of "qualified" prospects. The reason is simple mathematics. Assume that three first person contacted in your community is supposed to refer eight more persons. Those eight would then have to refer another eight each in order to get their "free" cleanery. That makes 64 referrals so far, and if each of these is supposed to get another eight.

Enough. The evidence of a cleanery is persuasive. Now back to helping you to identify and avoid it.

The product being sold, almost always at an exorbitant price, may be wall-to-wall carpeting, aluminum siding, a home intercom or fire alarm system, a water softener, electric broiler, a wig, even a car.

The salesman explains that the "bargain" he is offering is made possible by the fact that there are no advertising costs. This racket is thriving. Be on guard!

lost a baby in 1966 at 6½ months. Then she got pregnant and carried the baby nine months and three weeks over time, but he was born dead. He weighed 11 pounds, 12 ounces. She had a terrible time.

The doctor says she shouldn't get pregnant again, but she thinks if she waited about two years she could carry another baby. I'm afraid it could be her, and not just the baby, next time. What is your opinion? — Mrs. F. O.

It is very well known that diabetic women frequently have difficulties in pregnancy — miscarriage, toxemia of pregnancy, large babies, babies who are born dead or die soon after birth.

The longer the diabetes has been active, the more likely is there trouble. Your granddaughter's diabetes, discovered five years ago, is not of long duration, in terms of the above paragraph.

Still, after one stillbirth and one miscarriage, her prospects of a successful pregnancy are not particularly bright — except for this possibility: that she may not up to now have been keeping her diabetes under adequate control, even though she takes insulin.

Keeping diabetes under control means constant attention to diet and exercise, as well as medication, and it requires regular checking by the physician. This is especially true if the patient is a "brittle diabetic," one whose diabetes is unstable and difficult to keep in balance.

Another pregnancy for your granddaughter does not portend any particular risk for her, but the question of whether she can produce a living, healthy baby is another matter, and I think she should discuss this very carefully with her doctor.

Some things you have not told me. How well, in general, is she controlling her diabetes? If she isn't controlling it now, there is little likelihood of her doing it in pregnancy — and if she hopes for a successful birth she must keep it meticulously under control then.

Is she overweight? Is she gaining or losing? Is the amount and type of her insulin checked periodically?

Diabetic mothers do have healthy babies, but it is essential to keep the diabetes under excellent control. Under such conditions, a caesarean operation, about four weeks before the expected date of delivery, often makes the difference between success and failure, but even this usually is pointless unless the diabetes is maintained in correct stability.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Our daughter, 9, had beautiful, long thick eyelashes. Occasionally when one fell out, it would get into her eye and was a chore to remove.

She coaxed a friend to cut her eyelashes for her one day, the way most little girls decide to bob their hair now and then.

Other than being thankful that she didn't get her eye poked out, we are all very upset about it. Will this harm her eyes? There is barely length enough now to shade her eyes from the sun. Will the lashes grow out again? — Mrs. F. A. M.

I join you in being thankful that she didn't damage an eye. Otherwise — forget it. They'll grow out again slowly, and her eyes won't be harmed.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter is a missionary in Central America and has a jungle rot in her right toes, also a split in her fingernails. Could this be lack of vitamins or what? — Mrs. R. M.

Probably not. Far more likely is infection from one of fungus, which thrive in moist, warm climates.

Today in History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 24, the 359th day of 1968. There are seven days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1814, the United States and England signed the Treaty of Ghent in Belgium, ending the War of 1812.

On this date: In 1524, the Portuguese navigator who discovered the sea route to India, Vasco da Gama, died.

In 1650, Edinburgh castle in Scotland surrendered to the forces of Oliver Cromwell.

In 1865, a secret order called the Ku Klux Klan was organized in Pulaski, Tenn.

In 1942, during World War II, the French administrator of North Africa, Admiral Jean Darlan, was assassinated in Algiers.

In 1943, in a Christmas Eve broadcast, President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower would command allied forces in the coming invasion of Europe.

In 1949, a new Christmas song had swept the country. It was the sprightly "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer."

Ten years ago — The United States showed no interest in a Soviet suggestion for a conference on European security that would exclude the question of German unity.

Five years ago — The U.S. House of Representatives ended its longest session in more than 20 years.

One year ago — President Johnson returned to Washington for a family Christmas after a 27,000-mile flight around the world.

Billy Casper Is Golf's
New Emperor

Golf is not really a game, it's an empire. It is not governed, it is ruled.

Like all empires, the room at the top is off-times changed by violent coups, other times by fairly orderly succession, and still others by an almost unknown and unnoticed changing of the guard.

Arnold Palmer, for example, took over golf in the late '50s by storming the walls, pillaging the tournaments, and leaving the game ripped and torn and at his mercy. He was the Genghis Khan of Golf.

First Emperor

Bobby Jones was the first of the American emperors of the game. He came on the scene at the age of 14 and began to reach the quarter-finals of major tournaments against the men he had to address as "Mister" on the streets. You might say he came on as the crown prince and moved up.

Jones was finally done in by a palace guard of professionals. A guy who putted for a sterling silver tea set could hardly be expected to keep his concentration as long as a band of cutthroats who were putting for their supper. Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen and others took over when the clubs went to steel and the nerves to iron.

Byron Nelson won 19 tournaments in one year, 11 of them in a row. But the public's eyes were on bigger tournaments in the battlefields of Europe and Asia at the time. The era of Ben Hogan, who succeeded Nelson, glowed longer, brighter, and Hogan spent his emperorship either in a fairway or a tattered tape.

The Gospel of Casper

After Palmer, Jack Nicklaus turned out to be the man to beat. Trouble was, he frequently was. Which brings me to my notion that golf isn't even a triumvirate any more, that the new emperor may be a guy everyone thought of as just another spear carrier.

Billy Casper set out to serve golf, not to rule it. No one took Casper more lightly than Casper did. "If he couldn't putt," wise guys said, "he'd be a driving range pro."

It was the other pros, curiously, who first began to spread the gospel of Billy Casper. I remember once, Art Wall, who at first directed reporters' attention to a youngster on a tour named Arnold Palmer, scratched his head and said, "Sometimes I think Billy Casper's playing this game about as well as anyone out there." Casper had achieved that Holy Grail of golfdom, the absolute repeating swing. "It's a shock to see him not in the fairway," Davey Marr once noted.

It was the machine that began to uncover Casper, those steel and electronic snipers that are on every fairway. The tee shot for Casper was not notable for how it went or how far, but WHERE. It was in the center, right-center, or left-center of the fairway. Bill became the best POSITIONED golfer since Hogan. He was in the money a phenomenon 100 times in a row. It has been so long since he missed a cut that he can't remember it himself. He thinks maybe it was the U.S. Open in 1962. He came back from seven weeks in the Orient last year, blew the dust off his clubs, and won the Greater Greensboro Open wire to wire.

42 Tourney Wins

He has won 42 tournaments, more than $1 million. He won the U.S. Open twice, the Canadian Open, the Crosby twice, and finished fourth in the first British Open he ever tried last year.

Still, he was "Buffalo Billy," the man who ate bison for breakfast to the crowd people. People would rather watch him eat than putt.

When he shot a bear, he didn't stuff it, it stuffed him. They gave Billy a "day" down at Rancho La Costa Wednesday in honor of his being selected Pro Golfer of the Year. Billy dedicated the new 7,210-yard course where 78,000 yards of earth have been trucked in to provide a $250,000 improvement on a 214-acre course. It was noted at the presentation that Casper won six tournaments last year (seven if you count the 54-hole Southern California Open). Not since 1963 when Palmer won seven, has any player shown that superiority to the field. Billy won $205,168 — $50,000 more than his nearest pursuer, Nicklaus.

The last of the great bison eaters may not be the total monarch of golf (there are still pockets of resistance like the Masters and the PGA), but I think Billy is at least entitled to go to the palace mirror and try on crowns.

When the longest two seconds in pro basketball history were over Monday night, the New Orleans Bucs had beaten the Houston Mavericks 107-106 in an American Basketball Association game.

It took about five minutes to play those final two seconds after Red Robbins' jump shot had put the Bucs on top. The clock, for some unexplained reason, stopped and when it was noticed, both teams, Coaches Babe McCarthy of New Orleans and Jim Weaver of Houston, and a number of fans rushed the timekeeper.

When the rhubarb was settled, the referees gave Houston possession with one second. But the attempt at a court-length pass in struck the loudspeaker and New Orleans regained the ball. That meant the Bucs had scored, lost possession and regained possession of the basketball, all in two seconds.

In other ABA action, Miami dropped Indiana 118-109. In the only National Basketball Association game played, San Francisco whipped San Diego 125-95.

23 For Somerset

Willie Somerset, who led Houston with 29 points, had given the Mavericks a one-point edge with nine seconds remaining before the hectic finish. Jimmy Jones topped New Orleans with 27.

After the game, Weaver, Houston's coach, rushed over to the scorer's table, apparently to protest. But he loudly insisted: "I'm not complaining, I'm not complaining." McCarthy, New Orleans' coach, would only say: "I'm not pointing an accusing finger at anyone."

Willie Murrell poured in 32 points, doubling his 15-point per game average, and leading Miami past Indiana. Murrell hit 13 of his 20 shots from the field. Skip Thoren contributed 20 points and some strong rebounding for the Floridians.

Mel Daniels, recovering from a touch of flu, a bad eye and a broken nose, led the Pacers with 28.

FVL Jayvees Nipped, 44-41

Milwaukee Lutheran's jayvees sank three free throws in the last six seconds to edge Fox Valley Lutheran, 44-41, in a preliminary game at Milwaukee Friday.

FVL, which fell to a 12-1 quarter deficit, rallied to tie the game at 41-41 in the waning moments before the Knights took over at the foul line.

Dennis Kasten led the Foxes, now 44, with 19 points, including 11 in the last period. Bill Raabie's 15 markers paced Milwaukee.

Football and Single Girl Monday Night Football On TV Isn't Proving Profitable, Says Elinor

BY ELINOR KAINE

The Big Bopper, Pete Rozelle, is a little bit broke. Come 1970, when all 26 teams must share TV loot equally, pro football will need at least four million more dollars each year only to maintain the current annual level of 1.2 million dollars per team.

Pete began looking for money at his friendly neighborhood network CBS where he begged for a Monday night game of the week. Quickly, loudly, CBS said no. NFL Establishment propaganda to the contrary Monday night football is a bomb.

The Packer-Cowboy game last October got a 21.5 rating, good but hardly sensational.

The game was a vintage offering, remember, a rematch between last year's NFL champions, and The Big Bopper can't come up with very many big games. Earlier, in September before the networks began their season, the Rams vs. Cardinals got only a 13.6 rating against nothing, re-runs and Lana Turner sobbing. Lana rolled over the NFL.

Movie re-runs never do well, yet a re-run of "Exodus" came within two points of the Packers vs. Cowboys: "Exodus" lost a close one, 19.7 to 21.5. By comparison successful prime time programming, from which networks make enormous revenues, like "Julia" or "Mayberry R.F.D." gets a 24 or 25 rating.

Use Doubleheaders On simple economics Rozelle's Monday night plea never had a chance. CBS and NBC are barely breaking even on pro football right now in Sunday afternoon "C" time.

They have had to use doubleheaders to try and make up their investment and the second game is marked down, put "on sale" to advertisers.

My favorite thing is when The Big Bopper cries about overexposure, blaming Sunday's second game, and in the next breath says, "We can avoid overexposure by going on Monday night." His ghost writer must giggle.

If a network allowed The Big Bopper to invade Monday night prime time that network would be sacrificing the important money from regular Monday night programming for barely-breaking even football — a double disaster.

Never pity the networks, however. Even though they don't get rich on football they are anxious to carry it. Pro football is prestige programming, an exciting showcase which delights each network's affiliated stations.

Football provides a grand opportunity for the affiliates to promote themselves against their competition ("NFL here on Channel 2") and a grand opportunity to make money. In each game there are roughly 20 commercials and the networks give affiliates three or four participations to sell them locally and lucratively. Big Bopper has been dealing sotto voce 1970 with the networks tentatively offered a package of leftovers to CBS. Rozelle has been using high-handed tactics, wheels from both nets but why not? is no critical urgency that we see to move ahead." He pointed out the next major elections are two years in the future. He also said he doubted that a delay would seriously complicate the effort by losing the momentum remaining from the campaign.

"As far as momentum is concerned, those that are interested — and there are great numbers of people who are interested — they'll bounce back and they'll be right there" when the time comes, Friend predicted. He added, "It is not momentum that motivates people. It's their personal convictions."

He said he didn't know whether the new party might attempt to field candidates for state and local partisan offices, though he said, "there is a possibility that might occur."

He told the reporter asking the questions, "You're six months ahead of us." When the organization has been pulled together in an effective form suited to its chosen tasks, he said, "the papers will be filed."

State Chamber
To Hear About
Problems of Cities

Assembly Speaker Harold Froehlich of Appleton will be among seven top government and business leaders forming a panel on "Wisconsin Cities — A Statewide Problem" at Madison Jan. 20.

The conference will begin at 2 p.m. at the Park Motor Inn under the sponsorship of the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce.

Other panel members will include Henry W. Maier, mayor of Milwaukee; Wilbur J. Schmidt, secretary, State Department of Health and Social Services; Thomas M. Cheeks, Milwaukee public school system; John W. Joanis, president, Sentry Insurance, Stevens Point; Elmer L. Winter, Milwaukee, president of Manpower, Inc.; and Robert T. Huber, West Allis, Democratic floor leader in the Wisconsin Assembly.

Not Limited
John J. Lennon, state chamber president, emphasized that conference participation is not limited to state chamber members and is open to "any and all concerned citizens who agree with us that the public interest and discussion of public problems is the only possible way to promote the most effective possible government at all levels in our free society."

On the basis of advance reservations already received,

Waste Disposal Poses Problem In Wisconsin

Trash May Weigh
65 Million Tons
Annually in 2000

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The people of Wisconsin are throwing away trash and garbage approaching a rate of 10 tons per person per year, and the work of disposing of it will rise on an ascending curve.

That is the warning of the State Department of Natural Resources, which is now working out rules for solids waste disposal under the state's new environmental protection laws. The regulations for landfills and other methods of disposing of such wastes are expected to go into effect soon.

Pollution Rate

Director Lester P. Voigt, in the documentation of the new budget proposal of the State Department of Natural Resources, says the current aggregate of trash and garbage disposal in the state is estimated at more than 38 million tons and that the increase appears to be at a rate to make it likely that the total will reach 65 million tons before the end of the century.

Voigt offered these other illustrations of growing problems in the protection of the environment:

Motor vehicles in the state are now emitting 1.8 million tons of toxic gas and solids per year, and probably will reach 2.5 million tons by the year 2000.

The smoke from refuse burning today pollutes the atmosphere at the rate of 750,000 tons per year, and by the 1990's it is likely to reach nearly a million tons.

Voigt explained that the air in a city like Madison is "relatively pure," with the dust fall amounting to about 25 tons per square mile per month, in sharp contrast with a city like New York where it is over 80 tons, or in Door County, Wisconsin, one of the favorite tourist centers of the state, where it is only about 10 tons.

Appleton Library to Close for Holidays

The Appleton Public Library will close at 1 p.m. Tuesday, and reopen at 9 a.m. Thursday, Gordon Bebeau, director, has announced.

The same schedule will be observed on New Year's Eve.

Service Set by Lutheran Parish

LITTLE CHUTE — The second annual children's Christmas Eve service is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday at St. Luke Evangelical Lutheran Church, according to the Rev. James Diener, pastor.

Final details of the service are being worked out by the Sunday school staff including Lanny Prah, superintendent, and teachers, Mrs. Dennis Lucas, Mrs. Ewald Ring, Mrs. Roger Smith and Mrs. Martin Verhagen. Organist will be Mrs. James Diener.

The 3-part service will be entitled, "From Heaven Above The Christ Child Came," and is set for participation by children and adults. Each child will give a memorized recitation and join adults in singing familiar Christmas hymns and carols.

St. Luke, one of the youngest congregations in the Fox Valley, is temporarily using the theater building on Main Street and it is hoping to begin construction of its first church in spring, according to Pastor Diener.

The Christmas day service will begin at 10 a.m.

Donald Leiby to Head Congregation at Dale

DALE — Donald Leiby was recently elected chairman of the St. Paul Lutheran Church congregation.

Other officers elected are Gerald Smith, elder; LeRoy Ashauer, trustee; Dennis Laabs, school board; Carl Roester, stewardship captain; Harold Kester, auditor; Gordon Much, building and grounds committee; Edgar Bartel, high school delegate, and Adolph Selle, finance.

Teens Entertain At New London Yule Festivity

NEW LONDON — Students from the music and drama departments of New London Senior High School entertained the Catholic Women's Study Club annual Christmas meeting.

A local version of the "Tia Juana Band" played several selections. Sue Kloehn depicted a child's Christmas thoughts in an interpretation of "Little Becky's Christmas Wish," while Shelly Poehlman and Judy Leschke told the Christmas story in word and song.

Cherrie Radtke provided piano accompaniment. Jane Collier directed the non-musical portion of the program.

Members of the club will be the guests of the New London Woman's Club Jan. 6 when Sister M. Blandine will be the speaker.

St. Norbert Letting Adult Students Live Off Campus

DE PERE — St. Norbert College has announced that single students 21 years old or older will be permitted to live in approved housing off campus anywhere in the greater Green Bay area. Formerly, only single students over 23 years old were permitted to live off campus.

One of the chief reasons for the change is that all college dormitories have been filled this year and are expected to be at capacity for at least the next five years.

In making the announcement, the trustees said the college would have to be assured that dormitories will be at capacity in order for the change to stay in effect.

All student housing off campus must be jointly approved by the city of De Pere and the college.

In the 1969-70 school year, the Committee on Student Life estimated there will be approximately 150 students eligible to live in off campus housing.

'The Heaviest Load I've Had in 20 Years'

Christmas Bulletin to Children: Santa Is on the Way

BY HAL BOYLE
NORTH POLE, (AP) — He's off!

Santa Claus is on his way at last!

The jolly old saint and his famous reindeer are zooming through the Arctic skies right now, heading for the American border. He'll reach it tonight.

The Northern Lights switched on to a clear steady green—the "go ahead" signal. And the Royal Canadian Mounted Police sent Santa this message:

"We are clearing all air lanes in your path, old boy.

There is no speed limit for you tonight. The sky is yours. Go as fast as you like. Good luck!"

And Santa Claus needed that wide, clear road in the sky. For his big red sled was packed so full of gifts it overflowed. It looked like a hayrick zooming through the crisp air.

"Oh dear, oh dear," worried Santa, just before the takeoff.

"I do hope none of these presents falls out and beans some poor innocent rabbit down below. This must be the heaviest load I've had in twenty years."

"What is he fretting about?" whispered Donner to Vixen. "He's only riding that sled. We have to pull it."

Vixen laughed so hard the bells on her harness tinkled in merry music. And all the other reindeer laughed, too.

As Santa Claus climbed up into the seat of the sled, puffing a little because he has gained some weight this winter, three black and white penguins waddled across the snow in front of the reindeer.

"Here, here, get out of the way, please," said Santa Claus importantly. "Then he said, surprised:

"Why, what are you penguins doing up at the North Pole anyway? You're supposed to be at the South Pole."

"We're on a vacation," said one of the penguins. "We're looking for Florida. Have you seen it anywhere?"

"Climb aboard, climb aboard," boomed Santa. "I'll drop you off there. But I must say this is the first time I ever picked up three hitchhikers wearing tuxedos."

Just then Mrs. Santa Claus came running out waving a long piece of paper.

"You almost forgot your list of good children," she said. "Never mind," said Santa. "I don't need it. This year I am going to give a present to every little boy and girl, good or bad. The bad ones will feel sorry then, because they know they don't deserve a nice present. It'll make 'em try harder to be good next year."

"That isn't according to Hoyle," said Mrs. Claus, who likes to play bridge. "But it does make sense, you old softee."

Santa stood up to crack his whip in the air—the signal to be off. But then he heard a small voice crying:

"Wait, please wait."

It was Cluny, Santa's favorite little elf. The other elves gossiped about Cluny and said she was clumsy at making toys. But Santa knew it was only because she was so young. He liked her because she had a good heart.

"Here," said the tiny elf, holding up a small shiny figure.

"What's this? What's this?" grumbled Santa. "You're too late. My pack is already loaded."

"It is only my present to the world," said Cluny. "I made it at night in my room—all by myself."

Santa took the little figure from her hands. It was a beautiful angel with butterfly wings and a robe of purest white. In her hand the angel held a small magic wand.

"It is the angel of peace," explained Cluny.

"Why, Cluny!" said Santa, "this is better than all the other gifts put together. I'll see that your angel waves her wand for one day at least over every home in the land."

And he picked up Cluny and gave her a big whisker-ticky kiss on her cheek. Then he picked up his long whip again and cracked it sharply in the frosty air.

"Ho, ho, ho, here we go!" he roared. "Ho, ho, ho! here we go!"

The eight reindeer leaped forward and the big sled began sliding through the snow. Faster, faster, faster, faster—and then they were off the ground and into the air.

Santa was on his way. And tonight, if you go to bed, he will come to your house, wherever you are.

Crewmen Fly Home

82 Men, 1 Coffin Board
Planes at Seoul Airport

SEOUL (AP) — The 82 freed crewmen of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo winged their way toward San Diego today for a joyful Christmas reunion with their families.

Two Air Force C141s took off with the men and a coffin after a memorial service at Seoul's Kimpo airport for Fireman Duane H. Hodges, 22, of Creswell, Ore. Fatally injured when the North Koreans captured the Pueblo Jan. 23, he was the only fatality.

The planes were scheduled to arrive at San Diego's Miramar Naval Air Station at 5 p.m. CST after a refueling stop at Midway Island.

The Navy said at least 167 wives, children, mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters have gathered at the base. Many left their homes for San Diego in such a hurry they didn't have time to buy Christmas presents for the men.

Appear Rested
A U.S. Army band played "California Here I Come" and "Anchors Aweigh" as the men boarded the planes. Clad in blue Navy fatigues, they appeared rested and smiled and waved at a crowd of 200 persons seeing them off.

The Pueblo skipper, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, 41, was the last to board, stopping on the way to thank the band members.

The simple memorial service for Hodges was held in an open field near the planes two hours before they left. It was conducted by Lt. Cmdr. Stanton Wilson, chaplain for Navy forces in Korea, and was attended by Bucher, Adm. Edwin M. Rosenberg, in charge of the Pueblo crew's repatriation, and PO 3 C., Ralph E. Reed, 30, of Duncannon, Pa., in whose arms Hodges died.

The casket, draped in a U.S. flag, was carried by a military ambulance by eight Navy men. A platoon of sailors and Marines and about 200 American soldiers and civilians attended the service.

An eight-man honor guard fired three rounds of salute while Taps were blown.

Throughout the ceremony Bucher looked very sad, keeping his head down most of the time.

Medical Checkups
Rosenberg, who accompanied the crew on the flight, told a news conference earlier the men were in "fair to good condition."

Earth Might Not Be Flat After All

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Flat Earth Society acknowledged today after viewing pictures of the Earth from Apollo 8 that it must take another look at things.

The three-man American team circumnavigating the moon has somewhat torpedoed the society's idea that the moon as well as the sun are two small objects that go round and round the North Pole.

Since the moon shot, the Flat Earth Society has been more than ordinarily interested, said General Secretary Samuel Shenton.

"We have hardly had time to get together to form an idea and I wouldn't like to commit myself now at all.

Bucher Tells of Threats, Terror During Captivity

MIDWAY ISLAND (AP) — The commander of the USS Pueblo today questioned whether "the people who came out and captured the Pueblo had actually been authorized."

"We had the feeling they had blown it," said Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher during a two-hour refueling stop here en route home. He added that he felt the "sole purpose" of the North Koreans' capturing the U.S. intelligence ship was to "embarrass the United States government more than anything else."

The Pueblo crew cheered as Bucher described their captors as "apes."

Bucher and the other 81 surviving members of the Pueblo crew returned to American soil at this Naval installation 1,000 miles northwest of Honolulu and were greeted by Adm. John J. Hyland, Pacific Fleet commander.

They were scheduled to arrive at San Diego's Miramar Naval Air Station at 5 p.m. CST for a joyful Christmas reunion with their families.

"You are regarded as a group of young heroes and we are very proud of the way you stuck it out for such a prolonged period," Adm. Highland told the crew.

"The name of the game, of course, became procedure to try to assure one way or the other that you returned to us alive and that right off the bat precluded a heavy military move in retaliation."

"Every member of the crew had been subjected to terror of some kind one time or another," Bucher told the admiral, crew and newsmen here.

"Whether it was actual physical beating or not is beside the point, because the terror of expecting a beating is just as terrifying."

Bucher said he was "rarely beaten in the face because I was subjected to a lot of camera ordeals and they wanted me to look at least presentable to the camera."

"But this didn't keep them from caving in my ribs, or kicking me in the tailbone to the point where I was almost unable to walk for many weeks."

The 41-year-old commander said the crew "was subjected to various forms of physical and mental torture," but he stressed that "we were not brainwashed."

The skipper said the North Koreans threatened to kill him "but I wasn't particularly concerned about that. I held up pretty well during their ordeals but then they threatened to commence shooting the most junior members of the crew in my presence."

Bucher said that at one time the North Koreans threatened to kill Fireman Apprentice Howard Edward Bland, one of the youngest persons on the ship, "in my presence."

"The threat of a beating was always there," Bucher said. "Every time they decided to beat someone up it was done from an emotional point of view. It was always done from a studied attempt to create terror among my men and myself."

"The people who were more physically endowed were beaten harder. Engine man Chief Monroe Goldman was beaten so badly it was indescribable."

At Midway, the crew members were treated to the American favorites of hot dogs, hamburgers and chess dogs.

Apollo 8 Orbits Moon, Ready for Return Trek

Earthlings Get a View of Their Planet

America's Three astronauts aboard the Apollo 8 spaceship sent back this televised view of the Earth Monday from a distance of more than 200,000 miles as they streaked toward the moon. (AP Wirephoto)

Astronauts Describe Moon: Gray, No Color, Like Plaster

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronaut James Lovell, giving man's first eyeball report today on what it's like on the moon, sounded almost like a tourist who finds his long-sought vacation place looks prettier in pictures.

"The moon is essentially gray, no color, looks like plaster of paris—or sort of a grayish beach sand," he explained. "You can see quite a bit of detail. The Sea of Fertility doesn't appear to stand out as well here as it does on Earth."

To those who stayed up through the night to hear the first words of exultation as the spacecraft looped around the moon back into the radio range, the first descriptions must have been a disappointment.

Like the explorers they are, their first words were technical — describing the systems of the spacecraft.

"What does the old moon look like?" asked the ground, finally.

Lovell gave his plaster of paris report and continued:

No Holiday Paper
The Post-Crescent will not be published Wednesday, Christmas Day, to give its employees a chance to spend the holiday with their families.

"Craters are all rounded off — there's quite a few of them. Langrenus is quite a huge crater, has a crown to it. Walls are terraced."

"The craters are all rounded off. There's quite a few of them. Some of them are newer. Many look like—especially the round ones—look like they've been hit by meteorites or projectiles of some sort . . . quite a huge crater with a central cone to it. The walls of the crater are terraced, about six or seven terraces on the way down."

Said the ground: "Roger. Understand."

Prime Landing Site
As the spacecraft came up over the Sea of Fertility, Lovell said he could see "the rays coming out of" a crater.

Shortly afterward Lovell reported the ship was coming up over the site that's being considered prime for the first lunar landing.

"Be advised," Lovell told the ground, "the round window, the hatch window, is completely load over. We can't use it. Bill and I are sharing the rendezvous window."

Astronaut William A. Anders took up the description.

"We're coming up on craters Colombo and Gutenberg (located south of Apollo 8's track) . . . very good detail visible . . . we can see long parallel fault on Grobbins."

By this time the spacecraft was at the terminator—the area where light and dark met.

"Earth shine is about what we expected," said Anders of the light that is reflected onto the moon from earth. "You can see large craters quite distinctly . . . You get a good three-dimensional view of rims of larger craters."

Lovell found the unmanned triangular mountain that figures largely in surveys of a possible landing sight. Lovell had said he would name the area Mt. Marilyn—after his wife.

"Our first initial (survey) point is easily seen from our altitude," Lovell said. "We're getting quite a bit of contrast as we approach the terminator."

"Very Good Detail"
"It appears that visibility at this particular spot is excellent. It's very easy to pick out our first initial point and over this mountain chain we can see the second initial point—the triangular mountain."

Anders said there was "very good detail visible. We can see the long, parallel faults or Grobbins." A Grobbin is a rent in the moon.

"We're directly over our first initial point now for BI" (a landmark that relates to a projected landing site), Lovell said. "It's almost impossible to miss. Very easy to pick out. We can look right over into the second initial point. I can see very clearly the five-crested star formation which we had on our lunar chart."

"It is very easy to spot. You can see the entire rim of the craters from here with, of course, the white crescent on the far side where the sun is shining on it. The shadows are quite lengthy now."

Pictures Televised To Earth

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The daring explorers of Apollo 8 swept into an incredible Christmas Eve orbit around the moon today, reported it looked like dirty sand and televised to Earth startling pictures of a wild and wondrous terrain.

Air Force Col. Frank Borman, Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr. and Air Force Maj. William A. Anders joined the ranks of history's premier explorers at 3:59 a.m. CST today when they fired Apollo 8 into a perfect lunar orbit.

They gazed in astonishment at a sight never before seen by man—the backside of the moon that constantly hides itself from Earth.

It was akin to Columbus sighting the New World, Balboa staring down at the Pacific or De Gama rounding the Cape of Good Hope. It was Jules Verne, Buck Rogers and Flash Gordon all wrapped up in a neat Christmas package for the adventure-lovers of the world.

Dramatic Pictures
The astronauts then zipped around to the front side to beam to Earth dramatic pictures, accompanied by a vivid word description.

As the three space age wise men look back across 231,000 miles to their home planet this Christmas Eve, they are expected to beam a message to Earthlings, calling for peace and unity in a troubled world.

The plea could come in a television show planned to start from the streaking Apollo 8 cabin at 8:31 p.m.

That would be about 3½ hours before the astronauts are to fire their spaceship engine to shoot out of lunar orbit and head for home, aiming for a Friday morning landing in the Pacific Ocean.

The engine fired them into an initial orbit ranging from 60 to 193 miles high. A second firing during the third lunar orbit circularized the path at about 70 miles above the surface.

About the same time, Apollo 8 swept past the halfway point of the planned mission of six days and three hours.

"It looks like plaster of paris, or sort of grayish beach sand," was Lovell's first impression of this alien celestial body that has awed man since his beginning.

Two and one-half hours later, the astronauts flashed the scene to home television sets with the same camera that Monday had relayed pictures of the Earth from 200,000 miles away.

Block Landscape
The bright reflection of the sun dulled some of the features, but viewers could not help but be caught up in the excitement of seeing pictures beamed live by three adventurers 230,000 miles from their home planet.

Earthlings were treated to a bleak, barren landscape of craters.

'The Heaviest Load I've Had in 20 Years'

Christmas Bulletin to Children: Santa Is on the Way

BY HAL BOYLE
NORTH POLE, (AP) —
He's off!
Santa Claus is on his way at last!
The jolly old saint and his famous reindeer are zooming through the Arctic skies right now, heading for the American border. He'll reach it tonight.
The Northern Lights switched on to a clear steady green—the "go ahead" signal. And the Royal Canadian Mounted Police sent Santa this message:
"We are clearing all air lanes in your path, old boy."

There is no speed limit for you tonight. The sky is yours. Go as fast as you like. Good luck!
And Santa Claus needed that wide, clear road in the sky. For his big red sled was packed so full of gifts it overflowed. It looked like a hayrick zooming through the crisp air.
"Oh dear, oh dear," worried Santa, just before the takeoff. "I do hope none of these presents falls out and beans some poor innocent rabbit down below. This must be the heaviest load I've had in twenty years."

"What is he fretting about?" whispered Donder to Vixen. "He's only riding that sled. We have to pull it."
Vixen laughed so hard the bells on her harness tinkled in merry music. And all the other reindeer laughed, too.
As Santa Claus climbed up into the seat of the sled, puffing a little because he has gained some weight this winter, three black and white penguins waddled across the snow in front of the reindeer.
"Here, here, get out of the way, please," said Santa Claus importantly. "Then he said, surprised:

"Why, what are you penguins doing up at the North Pole anyway? You're supposed to be at the South Pole."
"We're on a vacation," said one of the penguins. "We're looking for Florida. Have you seen it anywhere?"
"Climb aboard, climb aboard," boomed Santa. "I'll drop you off there. But I must say this is the first time I ever picked up three hitchhikers wearing tuxedos."
Just then Mrs. Santa Claus came running out waving a long piece of paper.
"You almost forgot your list of good children," she said.

"Never mind," said Santa. "I don't need it. This year I am going to give a present to every little boy and girl, good or bad. The bad ones will feel sorry then, because they know they don't deserve a nice present. It'll make 'em try harder to be good next year."
"That isn't according to Hoyle," said Mrs. Claus, who likes to play bridge. "But it does make sense, you old softee."
Santa stood up to crack his whip in the air—the signal to be off. But then he heard a small voice crying:

"Wait, please wait!"
It was Cluny, Santa's favorite little elf. The other elves gossiped about Cluny and said she was clumsy at making toys. But Santa knew it was only because she was so young. He liked her because she had a good heart.
"Here," said the tiny elf, holding up a small shiny figure.
"What's this? What's this?" grumbled Santa. "You're too late. My pack is already loaded."
"It is only my present to the world," said Cluny. "I made it at night in my room—all by myself."

Santa took the little figure from her hands. It was a beautiful angel with butterfly wings and a robe of purest white. In her hand the angel held a small magic wand.
"It is the angel of peace," explained Cluny.
"Why, Cluny!" said Santa. "This is better than all the other gifts put together. I'll see that your angel waves her wand for one day at least over every home in the land."
And he picked up Cluny and gave her a big whisker-tickly kiss on her cheek. Then he picked up his long whip again and cracked it sharply in the frosty air.

"Ho, ho, ho, here we go!" he roared. "Ho, ho, ho! here we go!"
The eight reindeer leaped forward and the big sled began sliding through the snow. Faster, faster, faster, faster—and then they were off the ground and into the air.
Santa was on his way. And tonight, if you go to bed, he will come to your house, wherever you are.

Soldier From Neenah Killed In S. Vietnam

NEENAH — A Neenah soldier who had been listed as missing in Vietnam action is now officially dead, his parents were informed Monday.

The soldier is Army Pfc. Robert G. Blank, 29, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Blank, 400 Seventh St.

A 1968 graduate of Neenah High School, Blank enlisted in the Army in May and went to Vietnam in October. He was with Co. C, 25th Infantry Division. Details of his death have not been released.

He is survived by his parents and one brother, James. Funeral arrangements are pending at the Koster, Funeral Home in Neenah.

Astronauts Prepare for Return to Earth

... plains, boulder-plateaus and rugged mountains. The landscape looked like a most inhospitable place, a scene of desolation more complete than any seen on Earth. As Anders handled the controls for the 12-minute tele-communication from an altitude of about 100 miles, he described the surface as "whitish-gray, like dirty sand with lots of footprints."

... unnamed craters and mountains, including them. Anders turned lunar tour with such descriptions as: "We're passing over crater right now. Lovell's is next to it and Anders' right to it."

ward a bright object in the heavens.

After a suspenseful 36 minutes in which the astronauts were out of contact behind the moon, where they executed the orbital maneuver, Mission Control Center excitedly announced: "We've got it! We've got it! Apollo 8 is in lunar orbit."

After a check to make certain all systems were working, the control center asked: "What does the old moon look like?"

Navigator Lovell replied: "The moon is essentially gray. No color. The Sea of Fertility doesn't stand out as well here as it does on Earth. We're getting quite a bit of contrast as we approach the terminator."

The terminator is the line between darkness and light on the moon.

Landmarks Stand Out

He added that the view was very good and that it was easy to pick out landmarks.

Charting landmarks on the surface to guide future moon-landing astronauts is a major goal of the flight.

On the very first pass, the astronauts zeroed on a surface features intended to serve as guideposts for one of the five areas considered prime astronaut landing sites—a flat area in the Sea of Tranquility near the crater Censorinus.

"It's almost impossible to miss," Lovell reported. "Very easy to pick out. I can see very clearly the five-cratered star formation which we had on our lunar chart ... and over this mountain chain we can see the second initial point, the triangular mountain."

This is the unnamed mountain which Lovell calls "Mt. Marilyn" after his wife.

As Apollo 8 sped toward the terminator, Lovell continued his vivid description:

"You can see the entire rim of the craters from here ... the white crescent on the far side where the sun is shining on it. The shadows are quite lengthy now."

As Apollo 8 passed north of the craters Colombo and Gutenberg, Anders reported "very good detail ... they're very visible."

Gazing down on a landscape of crater-pocked plains, boulder-strewn plateaus and rugged mountains, Lovell reported on the great number of craters.

"The craters are all rounded off," he said. "There's quite a few of them. Many of them look like, especially the round ones, look like they've been hit by meteorites or projectiles of some sort. The walls of the craters are terraced, about six or seven terraces on the way down."

The historic engine ignition that propelled the astronauts into lunar orbit occurred at 3:29 a. m. CST.

They had been behind the moon for 10 minutes before firing the engine for a four-minute burst that consumed 16,000 pounds of fuel and dropped Apollo 8 into an orbit ranging from 69 to 193 miles, almost precisely the path sought.

"Keep a good eye on us," Borman advised the ground after Apollo 8 emerged around the edge of the moon.

Although future astronauts will land, from this day forward, the history books will be rewritten to record the names of Borman, Lovell and Anders. Schoolboys and girls will read of the exploits of these pioneers who braved a hazardous trek a quarter million miles across a trackless void to reach the moon, a goal man long has dreamed of.

Like three wise men of the past, they followed a bright object in the sky in search of their prize.

... that made us sometimes ashamed of ourselves," he said. "But we tried to give at least some evidence that we didn't believe a word of what we were doing."

"Value of Freedom"

Chung replied "Our experience in the Korean war taught us the value of freedom more than life."

"Freedom is worth more than anyone's life," agreed Bucher. "You have a splendid country. I hope your republic stands a thousand years at least. Thank you for coming by."

Chung, U.S. Ambassador William Porter, Philippine Ambassador Benjamin Tirona and several South Korean Cabinet ministers visited Bucher and about 15 of his men.

"We certainly felt the American support," said Lt. Edward R. Murphy Jr., 31, of Berkeley, Calif., the Pueblo's executive officer. "And we tried to do our best where we were."

Trouble Shaving

Murphy discussed shaving while in captivity. He said the crew had unsatisfactory results with their North Korean safety razors and eventually switched to old-fashioned straight-edge razors. P. O. IC Policarpo Garcia, a Filipino whose wife lives down here from the U.S. Army in Point Mugu, Calif., acted as advance camp just south of Pannunjom.

Felt Like Running

Blansett told Bonesteel he had felt like running across the "Bridge of No Return" from the North Korean side. The men ... had walked in slow, deliberate fashion, one by one.

Bucher also met Adm. Kim Yong-kwon, the South Korean chief of naval operations. "I've never been close to a chief of naval operations in my life," he said. "You are fighting for a system that is so superior to what they have north of that border. I can't find words to tell you how worthy it is to have the job of defending a system such as yours."

Of the North Korean system, Bucher said, "It is very brutal and worthless. There is no honesty. People are afraid to do anything. You can't even get somebody to say good morning to you."

He told another South Korean official "Thanks for all the hospitality in letting us come back to freedom on the doorstep of an intolerable system."

Ambassador Tirona talked with Garcia and two other Filipino members of the crew, Rogelio P. Abelen, 26, and Rizalino L. Aluague, 28. He said they were "okay" and "so happy to meet me."

Criticize U. S.

South Korean newspapers today welcomed the release of the crew but criticized the United States for bowing to North Korea's terms. They said it would encourage North Korea to become more militant and probable.

... result in increased guerrilla activity against South Korea.

"We are disappointed that the strong United States was unable to do anything except to sign a statement prepared by North Korea, a small rat in international politics. Washington should feel responsible for its failure to take action to rescue the crew members," said Dong-A Ilbo.

Although a U.S. representative signed a North Korean statement admitting "grave acts of espionage" were committed by the Pueblo inside North Korea's territorial waters, the American representative repudiated the statement before he signed it and the North Koreans acquiesced in this procedure. Secretary of State Dean Rusk called the statement "a worthless document."

... Masks Worn in Bank To Help Ward Off Flu

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Tellers at the Columbus Bank and Trust Co. have taken to wearing Chinese hats as part of precautionary measures against the spread of Hong Kong flu.

The tellers also donned surgical masks Monday in efforts to ward off the bug.

One lady ran screaming from the bank, thinking she had walked into a robbery, before officials put up signs at the doors to explain what was going on.

The hats were added to the costumes so police could separate employees from anyone attempting a masked holdup.

Christmas Presence Is Best Present

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — For most families of the returning Pueblo crewmen, there just wasn't enough time to buy Christmas presents.

Most of them rushed to catch planes to San Diego for a reunion today with their husbands and sons. They had only a few hours' notice.

"Seeing him is our Christmas present, and his seeing us is his Christmas present," said Mrs. George T. Massie of Roscoe, Ill. She said she and her husband received no letters from their son, Fireman William T. Massie, 20, during his 11 months in North Korea.

"It's going to be enough Christmas present for him to see us," said Mrs. John C. Higgins Sr., of St. Joseph, Mo., about her returning son, Engineer 3 C. John Jr., 23.

Relatives living closer to San Diego had more time to think about gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Ritter of Menlo Park, Calif., the first of the out-of-town families to arrive Monday, brought some of their son's civilian clothes.

"I hope they will fit him," said Mrs. Ritter.

Several other families did the same.

"This should be a joyous Christmas for the whole nation," said Rose Bucher, wife of the Pueblo skipper, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher. In the living room of their home in Pacific Beach, a San Diego suburb, several unopened presents had been placed under a Christmas tree. Stacks of mail, unopened and bundled,

... were everywhere in the room.

"They're letters from well wishers all over the world," she said.

But Mrs. Bucher, who often pressed Washington for quicker release of the Pueblo crewmen, admitted she, too, had not found time to buy her husband a Christmas present.

"Just me, I guess," Mrs. Bucher said. "and Ho, Ho, Ho. Merry Christmas."

Carol Murphy of San Diego, wife of the Pueblo's executive officer, Lt. Edward R. Murphy Jr., said her husband told her what he wanted for Christmas before he left home almost a year ago.

"He told me he wanted a special type bar of soap for Christmas and, like a dutiful Navy wife, I got it and have it all wrapped for him."

Another gift to Murphy is his daughter Victoria, born two months after the capture of the Pueblo last Jan. 23.

Mrs. John W. Brunsanah of Trenton, N.J., who arrived Monday with her husband to greet their son, Communications Technician 2C Paul Brunsanah, said they learned late Sunday they would leave Monday morning for San Diego.

"I didn't have time to buy a present," Mrs. Brunsanah said. "But if I had, I would have bought a fishing pole."

Clifford Is Winning Bitter Battle With Rusk

No LBJ Rebuke on Defense Secretary's

Y ROWLAND EVANS

WASHINGTON — Relations between the Pentagon's Clark Clifford and the State Department's Dean Rusk have now reached a point of bitterness surpassed in modern cabinets, with no easy resolution in sight.

In the twilight days of the Johnson Administration, the contrast between the cabinet's key figures is dramatic. While Secretary of Defense Clifford wheels and deals toward a Vietnam settlement, Secretary of State Rusk sits in the shadows — a lonely figure, nodding in his foggy bottom.

As we reported one month ago, the basic reason for the rift is Clifford's high-voltage campaign to start troop-withdrawal talks with Hanoi immediately without waiting to receive endless protocol battles over the shape of the negotiations table. But beneath this surface as it is a fundamental dispute over the intentions of Hanoi. Clifford, strongly backed by Bill Harriman, believes Hanoi really wants to negotiate a mutual troop withdrawal.

Not Certain
Rusk and his allies, which include White House national security chief Walt W. Rostow, the U. S. ambassador in Hanoi, Ellsworth Bunker, are less certain. Moreover, they heard Clifford's repeated criticism of top Saigon politicians as destructive to U. S. relations and to the life of the Saigon regime. The fact that Rusk has said publicly (as of this writing) to refute Clifford does mean he accepts his line. To the contrary, Rusk has exerted self-control to a point that amazed his colleagues. He is taking a longer look at the road, refusing to do anything now that would jeopardize the long-range goal: a Southeast Asia immune to Communist expansion. To Clifford's way of thinking, Rusk's public spanking of Saigon is going to make that road itely harder. Rusk's scolding a public brawl with Hanoi. Rusk has been quietly ing his side of the case to ident Johnson but with no ic results. Despite Rusk's unmed preeminence in foreign policy, Clifford's virtual takeover as the Administration's chief spokesman has ght no sign of a White se rebuke. The me of Rusk's intimates hint that, if this situation continued much longer and if the Administration were not in its twilight days, Rusk would have to resign. No such dramatic step is even contemplated, however, at this late stage.

Thus what the country is witnessing is the general disintegration ("unravelling," as one official put it) of an Administration in its sunset hours, with the established sources of authority no longer under total direction of the White House oval office. Making this inevitable process worse is the fact that the new Administration will be Republican.

A Democratic President-elect could settle the Rusk-Clifford policy dispute in a way President Johnson, a lame duck, cannot.

Aides Disagree
The President's attitude to the Rusk-Clifford dispute is viewed by top aides of Rusk and Clifford in exactly opposite fashion. Rusk men are certain Johnson intends to hold to a hard line of the Paris talks, giving Saigon every chance to agree to the shape of the negotiations table without undue pressure from Washington.

But Clifford men say the President wants nothing so much as quick agreement with Hanoi on mutual troop withdrawal, hopefully before he leaves office. The hint: Clifford would not dream of spanking Saigon publicly without White House approval.

Indeed, Clifford holds the high political cards. It was notable, for example, that Sen. John Stennis, a hawk on Vietnam, privately informed the U. S. negotiating team on a recent trip to Paris that, if Saigon tries to stall the talks and hamper progress, he would denounce the Thieu government. The U. S. Stennis said, could not allow itself to be wagged by the Saigon tail.

Thus far, not a single war hawk has attacked Clifford publicly for his Dutch uncle lectures to Saigon. Nor has there been the slightest indication that the incoming Nixon foreign policy team is unhappy about Clifford's performance.

What this strongly suggests is that the politicians now read the national mood as fed up with the war and ready to take the quickest exit, almost any exit that can be found. This is the mood Clifford has been exploiting and why he is winning his bitter battle against Rusk.

Problems of Health Change With Increasing Life Spans

BY E. H. JORRIS, M.D.
State Health Officer

Every tenth Wisconsinite has reached or passed their 65th birthday. On July 1, 1968, the age 65-and-over population of the state was estimated at 435,000 out of a total population estimate of 4,229,000. The greater proportion of aged people in Wisconsin today is the result of an ever-increasing life expectancy.

The average life expectancy of a child born in Wisconsin is 68.4 years for males and 74.8 years for females. Contrast these figures with those of the turn of the century when the life expectancy for new born babies was 48.2 years and 50.1 years for females.

Every one that is alive still has some life expectancy left, and this span for various age groupings too has been lengthened. At the beginning of this year, the average remaining life expectancy of those reaching the traditional retirement age of 65 was 13.1 years for men and 16.1 years for women. The increase in our allotted span has generally been assumed to be a miraculous blessing. But, like most blessings, this one too, is flawed with some drawbacks.

Causes of Death

The primary causes of death in the early part of the century were acute infectious diseases. As medical science conquered the infectious diseases, the onus of illness and death has been shifted to the chronic diseases, which are usually long lasting, difficult and expensive to treat. The National Health Survey revealed that 78 per cent of those age 65-and-over had one or more chronic diseases, and that 15 per cent required hospitalization each year.

The State Division of Health devotes a considerable portion of its resources to alleviating health conditions which have their greatest impact among the aged. These include preventive programs that benefit all, young and old. Specifically for the aged, the Division establishes and administers standards for institutions devoted to care for the aged, including certification for participation in the Medicare program.

These facilities have grown rapidly in number in recent years, financed in part by federal funds administered by the Division. Consultative services in the care and rehabilitation of the elderly are provided to hospitals and nursing homes. Working through local health services and the Visiting Nurses Services, the same kinds of help are provided for the benefit of home-bound patients.

Still, most of the age 65-and-over group can be physically self-sufficient, even those with some kinds of chronic disease.

OSU and the Black Students

The decision to expel the 94 black students at Oshkosh State University is the proper solution as far as the university, the state and its taxpayers is concerned. It disposes of the immediate problem and preserves the institution's authority to set the standards of conduct which its students must adhere to if they wish to stay in school.

But we have some misgivings as far as the fate of the individual students are concerned. The charge upon which the group was convicted in the regents' ruling was of occupying the university president's office and refusing to leave the premises when ordered to do so. There was no differentiation made between those who took part in the ransacking of administration offices and those who did not. The only differentiation was between four students who joined the stand-in late who may apply for reinstatement next semester, and the other 90 who must wait until next fall to apply for readmission.

We are also concerned about the effectiveness of the decision as it relates to what Oshkosh State University was attempting to accomplish in the first place, to provide an educational opportunity for disadvantaged black students, mainly from the core area of Milwaukee.

Granting the students an opportunity to apply for readmission is a gesture in this direction. And there were certainly critics who felt they should never be allowed to again enter a state supported institution of higher education, and that therefore the regents were too lenient.

But the basic problem remains. If there is any solution possible for the economic plight of disadvantaged students in this state or elsewhere, education is the best hope.

We would like to see Oshkosh State University go out of its way to encourage these students to apply for readmission. We fervently hope that the university continues to implement a course of study specifically designed for these students and others in their situation. And that the university uses the period between now and next fall to review and re-evaluate the program it launched for the disadvantaged with a view toward improving the educational aspects of the program and also improving the relationships between black students and the balance of the student body, the faculty, the administration, and the community in which the university operates.

Crew of the Pueblo Returns

The manner in which the United States was able to negotiate the freedom of the crew of the Pueblo will have to rank, for the time being at least, as much of a puzzle as the events which lead up to the seizing of the intelligence ship last January. Time will hopefully make some answers available, and as much as intelligence procedures will allow, some of the answers must come from the American government.

In what is new conduct even for Communists, North Korea agreed to accept an apology which was described for the world as bunk before it was signed. At least three reasons suggest themselves.

It may be that the North Koreans felt they had received all the propaganda mileage which was possible from the Pueblo incident. And in the controlled press of North Korea at least, it is a sure bet that the American disclaimer of the apology will not be noted. It also may be that the United States set some sort of a deadline for a reciprocal act. It was noted some weeks ago that several ships, built for North Korea in Europe, were about ready to set sail.

It will take a long time for the humiliation over the Pueblo incident to wear away. The world's greatest sea power had one of its ships taken by a sea power of no consequence. It must be remembered that the ship, probably with most of its secret intelligence equipment not destroyed, still is in North Korean hands. And now there is testimony that the crew was beaten while in captivity.

On balance, however, it was proper that the incident was kept in proper perspective by the United States, difficult as was the acceptance of this strategy. Like a Vietnam in miniature, the incident has been a tough lesson in the limitations of military power in today's world.

Now that the crew is safe, there are some explanations that must be made to the American people. The first, of course, is to try to determine with certainty that the Pueblo was in international waters as her captain says she was. But what is more important is an explanation, as far as intelligence procedures will permit, as to how ships like the Pueblo operate in relation to other segments of the military.

In the aftermath of the seizing of the Pueblo, there were uneasy conclusions that the ship was on its own as far as being in communication with air and sea units which could respond to trouble or that it was on its own because there was not sufficient strength which could respond. While intelligence gathering must be carried on at some risk, it should not be done as some sort of independent force.

At the convention of the National Conference of Editorial Writers last month, Admiral John McCain Jr., commander-in-chief for the Pacific, said flatly, "As far as I am concerned, we won't have another Pueblo. There won't be an exposed ship for one thing."

The world will judge that North Korea was the villain of the Pueblo incident. But as McCain indicated, the incident also has been a harsh lesson that adjustments must be made in the difficult area between intelligence gathering and military confrontation.

lying in a manger brought was that there is no security in possessions, not in military strength, nor in wealth or position or temporal power. Each man must still face himself, the human misery in the world, the tremendous need for compassion, kindness and love.

The Christmas star still lights the way but it also still shines in darkness. In the stillness of Christmas Eve in particular we can pray:

The timing of the flight of Apollo 8 was based upon the relation of the earth to the moon. But since it came during the season of Christmas, it has provided us just a little more perspective about man's earthly ambitions and that which is really important.

"And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

Despite the tremendous technological advances in the last two thousand years, man today needs the good tidings just as much as did the shepherds who kept watch over their fields on the hills around Bethlehem. The message that a helpless babe wrapped in swaddling clothes and

Methodists Hold Christmas Party

100 YEARS AGO
Quoted from the Appleton Post for Dec. 31, 1868.

The celebrations began on Christmas Eve, the most of the Sunday Schools meeting at their respective churches. The Methodist Church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and every child whether belonging to the school festival or not was welcomed.

The stage was tastefully decorated and bore two mammoth Christmas trees, laden with all sorts of attractions. A short address was delivered by President Steele, and declamations were given by many children. The singing was excellent, but that by the two Indian girls, the Misses Corbett, was much admired.

The entrance of Old Santa Claus himself and the generous distribution of gifts created much merriment among the children and appropriately closed the proceedings.

How Did Shepherds Tell Families What They Saw in Bethlehem?

BY HENRY SIMON

Almost everybody knows that the shepherds were the first people to hear the "Good Tidings" of the birth of the Christ. But nobody knows any specifics about the families of these shepherds, and Scripture says nothing of how the shepherds shared the news with them.

Yet almost surely some of the shepherds did have families, and beyond reasonable doubt these must have heard the shepherds' exciting report as soon as the latter returned to their homes.

This, then, is an Appleton pastor's imaginary but realistic reconstruction of the story of the first Christmas, as one of the shepherds might have told it to his teenage son Amos.

The reader will bear in mind that these shepherds had been stunned by a miracle — the sudden, supernatural light, the angel messenger, the angelic choir, the suspense-filled run to Bethlehem, the finding of the Babe in the manger. They must have been fairly bursting with the impact of it all, even tho' that impact had still only begun to register. The son, on the other hand, had experienced nothing of all this. He was likely a typical teenager, alert, brought up in the Hebrew tradition, eager, perhaps skeptical.

"Hello, Amos, hello!"

"Son, do I have news for you! You'll have trouble believing this."

"You know how often we've talked together about the promises of the Messiah which God has given us in the Sacred Writings. You've studied and, like I in my youth, you've memorized the prophecies of Moses and David and Isaiah and the rest. You remember how we talked just the other week about Micah's strange prediction regarding Bethlehem as the site of the Messiah's birth."

"You said: 'That was prophesied hundreds of years ago. How could Micah possibly know such a thing?'"

"I said: 'Only if God revealed it to him could he know.'"

"Then you did a little imagining. Just think," you said, "Little Bethlehem, right over that hill. It couldn't be, could it? Not that little town!"

"Well, Amos, I've just come from Bethlehem. It not only could be, it is! The Messiah IS there, in Bethlehem! Remember that old cave-stable behind Isadore's inn? I saw the Christ, lying in a manger. There's not the slightest doubt! I saw Him!"

"Wait — I know you have questions. Let me tell you why I am sure, and what got me to go to Bethlehem last night."

"We were out there on the hillside, keeping watch over our flocks. It was a night much like any other night. Nothing happening, but you had to take your turn guarding the sheep, because you never know when danger might threaten."

"I was dozing — I wasn't on guard at the time — when suddenly I was awakened. But not by noise, by a light."

"What a light that was! I have never, never seen anything like it. Bright, startling lightning, yes. I've seen that. But this light — It was so different, and, unlike lightning, this light lasted."

"It was the very glory of the Lord, Amos. At first it made us all terribly afraid. And our fears weren't helped when a voice spoke. Amos, it was a supernatural voice, the voice of the angel of God!"

"But as the angel's message began to get through, our terror began to change to awe and wonder."

"Fear not," he said to us. "I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, who is Christ, the Lord!"

"Those were his very words, son. Of course, we were scarcely even beginning to realize what he had said, when he said more, as if to reassure us. 'This shall be the way you can be sure. You will find the Babe, wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger."

"And suddenly, Amos, there was with that angel just a multitude of the heavenly host! They were praising God. You never in your life heard a choir like that! 'Glory to God in the highest!' they said. 'On earth, peace, good will to men!'"

"When the angels' choir had finished, they returned to heaven. We looked at each other — I don't know how long. Was it all a dream?"

"Finally somebody broke the spell. 'What are we waiting for?' he cried out."

"What WERE we waiting for? Bethlehem was just over the hill and, though the angel was gone, he had said clearly enough that the Messiah was there, a Babe, in that little town — just like Micah had foretold it."

"Well, son, you can guess the rest. Let's go right now to Bethlehem." I said. "Let's see this thing which has come to pass, which the Lord has made known to us."

"So we hurried to Bethlehem."

"And we saw!"

"It is all true! Just as the angel told us."

"We found the baby!"

"His mother's name is Mary, and the husband is Joseph."

"Joseph said the baby's name would be 'Jesus.' He said that God's angel had appeared to him, too, in a dream, and instructed him to give that name to the baby, because 'Jesus' means 'one who saves,' and this Baby would 'save His people from their sins'."

"What???"

"You don't have to ask! Get going! Hurry over there. See for yourself the long-prophesied Messiah!"

"God has fulfilled His promise!"

Fish-Eating Birds, Animals Are Persecuted in Wisconsin

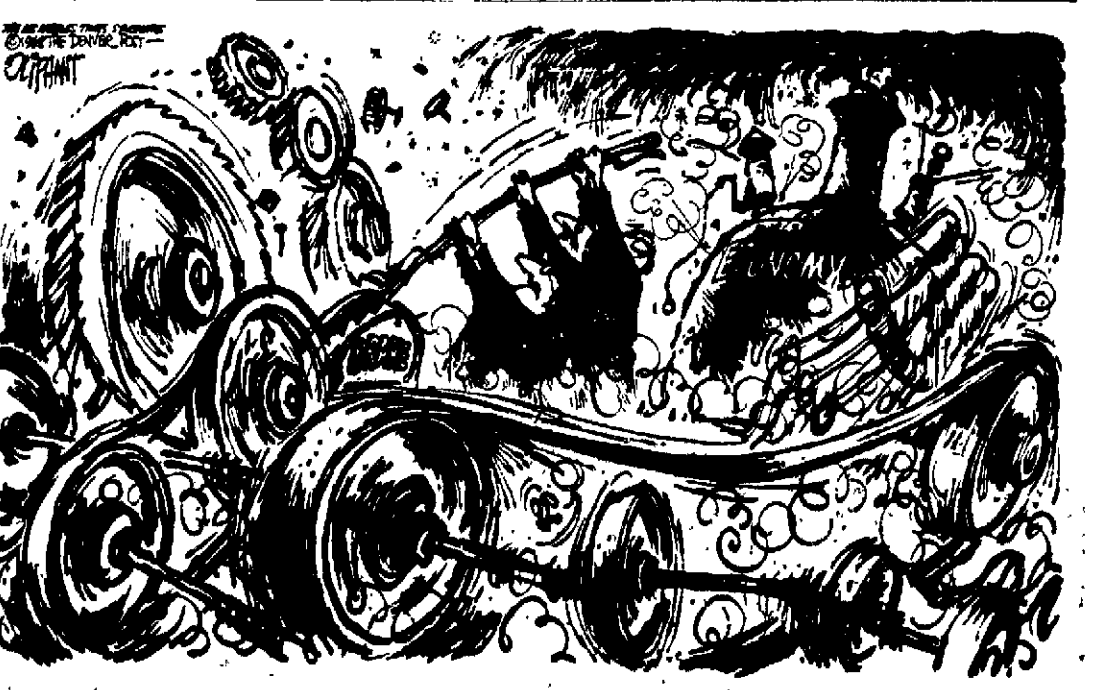

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

The letter in the Forum Friday was very correct. The Trout Unlimited Secretary Treasurer was as all trout people do see conservation as a big fat trout.

The letter did not touch on the fact that all the fish rearing ponds in the state of Wisconsin are guarded with shot guns and steel traps. (Not nets.) A fish-eating bird may make a mistake and fly into Wisconsin in the spring but 100 to one he won't live to fly out in the fall. The same for a small fur bearing animal who may have had the misfortune to be born in the vicinity of a fish hatchery. Don't mention conservation if you own an uncovered fish rearing pond.

Kahl Seeks Re-election As Chief of State's Public School System

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — If there was anything unexpected in the press release of State Supt. of Public Instruction William C. Kahl the other day announcing his plans to file for an elective term, it was in the modest brevity of the statement — at least from the viewpoint of the reporter who is accustomed to the lushly flowing rhetoric of other public office-holders on such occasions.

In three simple sentences, the man who has been involved in teaching or school administration during his entire adult life declared that he would like to continue in the office to which Gov. Knowles appointed him two years ago when Angus Rothwell became the administrative chief of the Coordinating Council for Higher Education.

MOST ARE RETURNED

If tradition prevails, there is every chance that Supt. Kahl will be returned to office, as were most of his modern predecessors without difficulty, and often without opposition.

The office is non-partisan. Hence, the election is in the spring. Like the members of the State Supreme Court, the only other elected officials of the state who run on nonpartisan ballots, the constitutional supervisor of the public schools is not involved in the ordinary wrangles of party politics and their hazards.

The election of a superintendent is in the spring, when there is a smaller vote than in most fall elections. It is probably a more discriminating vote also, another factor favoring the reelection of most state department of education heads.

Most of Kahl's immediate predecessors came to their jobs from administrative or supervisory responsibilities in local schools. Among them are the late John Callahan, George Watson, and Angus Rothwell, who had about 40 years of service combined in that office. They were "establishment" men, as the saying goes. They were men well known in school administration circles, among school boards, and among teachers, as qualified professionals.

ONE PARTISAN CAMPAIGN

Only once during the period covered by this reporter's memory was there a hint of partisan division in an election for a superintendent. When George E. Watson ran for the first time about 20 years ago, an otherwise personable and acceptable opponent made the probably fatal error of appealing to special ideological groups, in this instance the liberal forces of labor and other special interests.

The miscalculation was serious not only because such forces turn out in lesser numbers in spring elections for non-partisan officials, but because it provided the cue for an especially forceful mobilization of the campaign for the nonpartisan office.

The 60-year-old Kahl has a kind of classical background for his job, according to Wisconsin precedent. He worked in small city schools in several localities and had some administrative experience on the line, so to speak.

But 20 years ago he joined the staff of the agency he now heads, a fact which may suggest that he became superintendent with somewhat more knowledge and experience than most of the men who had served before him.

PROPOSED AIDS CHANGE

Thus he will also be the "establishment" man, even if there is a competitor on the ballot. It is no disparagement to say that the "establishment" is well acquainted with the fact that he has proposed, whatever its fate may be, the most ambitious revision of the state financial aid plan for local schools that has been offered lately. No doubt it was offered sincerely, and out of deep conviction. But the reality is that it will be useful in attracting the friendly interest of the thousands of influential persons involved in the public schools, nevertheless, even if the legislature receives it reluctantly and cuts it back, as it probably will believe it is required to do.

In judging the office to which Kahl wants to be returned, the electorate should remember that it has many other responsibilities beyond that of supervising the local school program. The superintendent sits as a voting member of all of the state boards governing higher education, which in many respects pose more numerous and costly problems than do the local schools.

Strictly Personal

Christmas Trappings Of Recent Vintage

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The whole panoply of Christmas trees and decorations and presents and cards and Santa Claus figures surely must seem to the uninitiated to be a "tradition" almost as old as Christendom.

But it is not. All the festive compa ratively late date, Christmas here was nothing of a secular, much less a juvenile, celebration.

Following Queen Victoria's marriage to Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha in that year, a mania for German customs overtook England. Until then, even the concept of "Santa Claus" and his reindeer were unknown in English-speaking countries, so little "Christian" was the whole idea.

Indeed, the name Santa Claus is a contraction of "Santa Nikolaus," who is the patron saint of children in Germany, and whose feast day was Dec. 6, not Christmas Day, when someone would don the costume of a bishop and distribute little trinkets to "good children."

And the well-known Christmas card is of equally recent vintage, but is an English addition not imported from Germany. It is generally believed that the earliest Christmas cards were designed as late as 1844 by W. C. T. Dobson, a painter of the Royal Academy who specialized in pretty and innocuous illustrations of no particular merit.

From a religious holiday that was far more reflective than festive, Christmas has willy-nilly been turned into a holiday in which "good will" means buying a child a present, and "peace on earth" means buying a neighbor a drink. Originally celebrated to mark the birth of the "new man," it has more and more come to signify the emptying of pockets for the old man, and the impending domination of things over spirit. Exactly what Jesus was coming to away from.

trappings we associate with the Christmas celebration were unknown to us when Lincoln was a little boy. It is only in the last century or so that what we fondly call the "Christmas atmosphere" has been enveloped in stockings and gift wrappings and sleighs and deer and all the rest of that delightful, if burdensome, nonsense.

We re-create "traditions" in our own minds, to make them seem older and deeper and more symbolic and significant than they really are — so much so, of course, that the symbolism eventually obscures the substance and becomes a goal in itself — as the physical trimmings of Christmas have turned Christ's Mass into a kiddie holiday.

Actually, the celebration centering around the Christmas tree — decorated with candles and dripping with presents — arrived in America by way of England through Germany after 1800. Until that

Remaining Negroes at OSU to Quit in Protest

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The 19 of the 94 Negro students stand by the warning they gave, group of about 125 members plan a number of steps, including a campus protest march Jan. 7.

The demonstrators had been placed on suspension Nov. 22. The regents, after a hearing, voted unanimously to expel them, but to allow them to apply for re-admission next summer. Four other suspended students were left on suspension.

Oshkosh faculty members, meanwhile, said they would help the predominantly white Committee of Concerned Students protest the regents' decision.

A spokesman said a faculty

Miss Fay Graham, an Oshkosh, were freshmen. Miss Graham was among the State University plan to quit, onstration on the Oshkosh campus next January because of the estimated $12,000 the explosion of 90 Negro demonstrators, according to one of the students.

Most of the 11,000-student university's 113 Negro students voted unanimously to expel them, but to allow them to apply for re-admission next summer. Four other suspended students were left on suspension.

Oshkosh faculty members, meanwhile, said they would help the predominantly white Committee of Concerned Students protest the regents' decision.

Teachers of Handicapped Needed in State

Stipend to be Asked For Studying of Special Education

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — The constitutional mandate for the education of the one child in 10 in Wisconsin who is handicapped cannot be fulfilled without more specially trained teachers to handle classes for such children, the State Department of Public Instruction says.

The department said it will ask the new Legislature, convening next month, for a special fund to provide "stipends" for college-bound young men and women who are interested in learning to teach classes for handicapped children.

The department quoted a recent opinion of the state attorney general interpreting the state constitution as requiring such services for children between the ages of four and 20 who are handicapped, as well as those who are normal and healthy.

The best estimate is, however, that at least 40 per cent of the handicapped child population of the state is not now receiving such service.

35 Teachers Yearly
Wisconsin school districts should have 120 of such instructors available to them yearly, but lately the state's training institutions have been turning out only about 35. There are six institutions within the state offering such training.

The department said it will ask for $240,000 a year in aids for candidates for such teaching positions, to enable them to pay their college expenses. The subsidies will range from $800 for the freshman year, on a rising scale, to $2,000 for fifth year students.

The first year stipend would be granted without conditions.

The successive payments would be regarded as loans, which could be repaid "by service in public education in Wisconsin" at the rate of one third of the amount owed for each year of service, or by payment in cash.
